THIRD SERIES GAME POSTPONED BY RAIN

Washington, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—Washington's Senators and the Pittsburgh Pirates jumped back to the National Capital today only to be blocked off by a downpour of rain that caused postponement of the third game of the World's Series until tomorrow.

Commissioner Landis formally declared the game off at noon after he and rival club officials decided that the diamond at Griffith Stadium drenched by a downpour almost continuously throughout the morning, was not in fit condition for play.

The commissioner's announcement blasted the hopes of a few hundred fans who had held out to the last for an abatement of the shower that would give the field a chance to dry and permit the play to go on.

Most of them had gone to their seats in the stands, for the gates were opened in the middle of the morning, regardless of the weather outlook.

The postponement was welcomed alike by travel and battle-worn players of the two clubs, as well as the

REPORT LYNN COP IS HELD

Five weeks ago Patrolman Ernest R. McCreery of the Lynn police pleaded sickness and obtained a year's leave of absence from Mayor Harlan A. McPhetres. Today a man giving the name of McCreery was detained by the police of Flint, Mich., where, the Lynn police say, he was found living with a woman whom he claimed as his wife.

This afternoon Chief Thomas M. Burckes of the Lynn police conferred with Mrs. McCreery on the question of taking action in the case. When the leave of absence was granted McCreery Chief Burckes was away on his own vacation.

The wire from Flin said the man held there was in possession of a Lynn police badge and claimed to be a Lynn officer.

"My compliments to Coloney Mitchell," he said. "Let Commander MacMillan answer him!"

LANSDOWNE'S WIDOW SCORES 'POLITICS'

Washington, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—Mrs. Margaret R. Lansdowne, widow of the commander of the Shenandoah, reiterated today before the naval court of inquiry that the navy department had ordered the airship on the Western flight for political purposes over the protest of her husband.

To support her statement she read from the official correspondence introduced into the record showing that Lansdowne wanted the flight postponed to the second week in September and also wanted a trial flight to test the Detroit mooring mast.

"My husband was very much opposed to this flight," she said. "My husband also felt that the Shenandoah was a ship of war and should not be taken inland.

"In view of the fact that the success of carrying out this proposed itinerary and schedule necessitates landing at the Detroit mooring mast, it is recommended that the Shenandoah make a trip to Detroit during the last week in August to test out the functioning of this mase," Mrs. Lansdowne's statement continued.

"It is pointed out that this mast is of a new type, and differs considerably in certain details from the standard navy mast. Thus, in failure to function properly of either the mast or gear, the Shenandoah could carry sufficient fuel to safely return to Lakehurst, and any defects or deficiencies be remedied prior to the Middle Western flight."

"It is of course understood that in the case of a trial flight of this kind the commanding officer could pick his weather, having no schedule to follow. Because of weather conditions during the thunderstorm period in the Middle West, the long legs on rigid schedule and the un-

EARTH TREMBLES IN GREAT AREA AS FAR EAST AS MAINE

Chimneys were toppled, houses shaken and windows rattled today by an earthquake affecting several hundred square miles of territory stretching from Manchester, N. H., to Portland, Me.

Eastern New Hampshire was hardest hit, particularly in the Merrimack River Valley and Lake Winnepesaukee regions.

The Harvard seismeograph record "a thickening of the line" at 8:56 today. Professor Kirtley F. Mather said the instrument showed the disturbance to be purely local to New England.

Many of the communities affected were in the area disturbed by the quake last Winter and the February quake of 1915.

The tremors were very distinct at Ossipee, N. H., where buildings were shaken and dishes were thrown from their shelves.

Trial of a prisoner in the Carroll County Courthouse at Ossipee was interrupted when the judge's bench shook, the typewriters started clicking and it became impossible to hear the witness for the chattering of his teeth.

At the home of Harry Blanchard at Sandwich, N. H., a chimney fell and windows cracked. Windows in the home of Harry Hudson of Tuftonboro were shattered.

CROOKS GET 200 AUTOS IN WEEK

Police figures show that more than 200 automobiles have been stolen in Greater Boston in the week ending at 8 o'clock today.

The report for the past twenty-four hours reveals that twenty-three machines, nearly one an hour, were taken in Boston proper, and eight more from nearby towns and cities.

The majority of the machines stolen in Boston were taken from the Back Bay and South End districts, and it is safe to assume the figures will be doubled over the week end.

GOVERNOR TRUMBULL QUIT PLANE IN STORM

Danbury, Ct., Oct. 9 (A.P.).—Governor John H. Trumbull had an engagement at the Danbury Fair today and kept it, though it was necessary for him to make an airplane landing in a field in Newtown and finish his trip by auto.

The Governor started by the air route from Hartford with Major Talbot O. Freeman as pilot.

The plane ran into a storm when entering the Naugatuck Valley and, not to lose time, Freeman made a landing in a field above the dam at Stevenson. The Governor and the Major completed the trip here in an auto.

Freeman says the plane was not damaged, that the landing was NOT a forced one, and that neither the Governor nor himself experienced eve a shakup.

500 LYMAN BOYS TO SEEK 'SLAIN' MASTER

Westboro, Oct. 9.—Five hundred boys of the Lyman School will be turned loose in the woods under guard tomorrow to search for George Ross, the fifty-two-year-old school teacher, who disappeared Tuesday evening.

Rain stopped the search of the police, firemen and volunteers today, flooding the swampy country in which the schoolmaster disappeared.

Tacitly admitting that her husband has been affiliated with the Ku Klux Klan, Mrs. Ross said today she feared an anti-Klansman had beaten him to death Tuesday night, using the brass pipe which is pretty nearly the only tangible clue to the whole case.

State Detective Robert E. Molt, who has charge of the investigation, has come around to her way of thinking; he attaches some impor-

Mrs. Ross scoffed at the idea amnesia and a straying off, tod From other sources, it was learn that the first of the week he friends he had recently seen strang men hanging about the school. had also told friends he had be threatened by anti-Klansmen.

"I'm afraid he has been killed his body hidden," Mrs. Ross said

"My husband is very outspo and never hesitates to say just he thinks.

AMNESIA, SAYS SCHOOL HE

A strong interest in the mis man's reported activities in the Klux Klan brought forth the gestion that the anti-Klan have been instrumental in the dis pearance. Ross, according to wife, was prominently identified the local Klan. Others state tha was credited with being the Kleagle of the conclave.

Among the supporters of the amnesia theory are Charles Keeler, superintendent of the school, and seemingly well versed in the habits of the missing man.

Vincent F. Meigs, assistant house master in Oak cottage in which Ross held charge, reported to Mr. Keeler that the headmaster's recent actions were of peculiar nature. Ross appeared to be suffering from a mental attack of a severe nature, according to Meigs.

COMPLAINED OF HEADACHES.

Others in close contact with Ross stated that he had been complaining of splitting headaches and was seeking medicinal relief in the form of a strong drug. One of these, a man apparently well informed as to Ross' physical condition said:

"I had noticed for several weeks that Mr. Ross was not well. He complained continually about splitting headaches. He said his back hurt him and he thought he must have strained it. He didn't seem able to eat much of anything and said his stomach was giving him a lot of trouble.

"Mr. Ross had a small bottle of some powerful drug he had obtained in Worcester and I noticed that he was taking five drops of this in water several times a day.

APPEARED WORRIED.

"Several days before he disappeared I went to the school authorities and reported that Mr. Ross was in bad shape. I had noticed that he was very nervous and was getting worse. He seemed to worry a great deal.

"A few days ago Mr. Ross sent for several prominent employes of the school and had a secret night conference with them behind closed doors in Oak Cottage. Mr. Ross' assistant at Oak Cottage was not invited to the conference, neither was Mrs. Ross. After this Mr. Ross seemed to me to be even more nervous and worried than he was before."

State Detective Robert E. Molt of Worcester and Police Chief Thomas W. Humphrey are carrying on their investigation into Ross' past.

POPULAR AT SCHOOL

Although he has been at the school for four years there seems to be little known of his previous activities. He is believed to have been a cowboy and what little conversation he had dropped relative to his past gave Arizona as the setting.

His popularity with the inmates of the school was attested to in the aid being given the authorities in collecting data. The boys appear to have held him in high regard—as one who did not beat or kick them. He was nicknamed "Arizona," probably because of his past history.

It was revealed that a few days before his disappearance Ross was present at a secret meeting, presumably a Klan affair, from which Mrs. Ross was excluded, during which he told those in the session that strange men had been watching and following him about at night.

The officials, both school and police, have definitely discarded as a clue a threatening letter which Ross is said to have received.

4-ALARM FIRE IN CAMBRIDGE

A four-alarm fire, flames from which lighted the sky for blocks around and attracted thousands of spectators, destroyed the three-story wooden building used as a factory of the Greylock Candy Company at Ames and Main streets, East Cambridge, early today. The building and its contents, valued at $25,000 were a total loss.

Situated in the heart of the factory district, the blaze assumed a serious complexion through the danger to other buildings from flying sparks. It was evident to Deputy Chief Cutler L. Vose, who responded on the first alarm, that additional precautions would be necessary. While the original complement was trying to check the flames, Vose ordered the three successive alarms.

The additional apparatus and men were utilized in protecting the adjoining properties after it was apparent that the fire in the Greylock plant could do no harm beyond burning itself out.

The fire was discovered by Patrick Gilgowski and Roland Ford, watchmen employed in nearby factories. A loud explosion centred their attention and resulted in their rushing to the Greylock plant. They said the place was a mass of flames when they arrived, but a few moments after hearing the noise.

For a time the Page and Shaw candy factory, immediately in the rear of the burning building, was threatened. By wetting down the building the danger from sparks was nullified. Special fire protection was also afforded a gasoline filling station across the street from the Greylock plant.

DRIVER HELD IN AUTO CRASH; 4 INJURED

Four persons were injured, when a sedan and a touring car collided early today at Massachusetts avenue and Southampton street, Roxbury.

Out of that number, a woman and a man are in the City Hospital suffering possible brain concussions.

John F. Lydon, Church avenue, South Boston, driver of the automobile in which the four were hurt, is under arrest at Station 9, Roxbury, charged with drunkenness. Later, application will be made in the court for a warrant charging that he operated the automobile while under the influence of liquor.

Lydon was not injured. A companion, the fifth man in the party, received minor cuts and bruises and refused hospital treatment. Police did not get his name.

Three of the injured are residents of South Boston. The other, a girl, hails from East Boston.

Taxis and the Station 9 wagon were used in bringing the injured to the hospital.

Mrs. Mary Ahearn, 34, of No. 301½ Broadway, South Boston, taken to the hospital in a taxicab, was found by Dr. O'Connell to be suffering possible brain concussion and injuries to the right leg. She went home shortly after.

Miss Margaret Morrison, 28, of No. 4 Monmouth street, East Boston, was found by the same physician to have possible brain concussion and an injury to the back.

Frank Keenan, 21, No. 80 Baxter street, South Boston, was the other discovered to have received possible concussion. Another injury to the letf thigh was evident.

Lydon, alleged driver of the automobile, questioned by Policeman Crowley, was brought to the station and booked on the drunk charge.

FIVE ESCAPE INJURY.

Although their machine was heavily damaged, Louis Magaletti, of No. 21 Mill street, Westwood, operator of the other machine, and five others, all Edison Light Company employes, escaped being hurt.

The touring car was demolished.

Lyndon and his party were traveling south in North Hampton street when the accident occured. Police declare that the auto was going at a fast rate of speed when it collided with the larger car.

NAVAL OFFICER SLIPS ON DECK, LOSES LIFE

Philadelphia, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—Lieut. W. S. Jackson of the U. S. Hannibal was drowned today when he fell from the deck of the vessel at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. It is believed he slipped on the freshly washed deck and fell into the river, striking his head against the side of the pier in the Fall. Lieut. Jackson was twenty-five years old and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1921. He had been attached to the Hannibal ever since.

Middlesex Superior Court and held in $25,000 bail.

Report of the secret indictments today winds up the investigation of the Middlesex crime wave by the Grand Jury, during which more than one hundred witnesses were heard, including officials of the Central Trust Co., thirty police officers and many civilians, men and women.

Just before the Grand Jury report, a strong understanding in Cambridge had it that leaders in the underworld, particuuarly those identified with the slaying of Edward Rose in the Ward payroll holdup, are fleeing to Canada.

The exodus, with its possible immunity and certain delay through the difficulties involved in international extradition codes, is said to have followed the sudden successful raid in which the police believe they rounded up the Waltham car barn gang.

The police of Montreal and other Canadian cities have been warned by the authorities who are proceeding without dismay to continue their unrelenting search for those involved in the Ross murder.

Narcotics and liquor were named as the cause of the admitted downfall of one of the five accused men, who is authoritatively reported to have made a complete confession to District Attorney Reading.

His story is said to reveal the general use of drugs and rum by members of the West End gangs. Prior to joining the gang the man is said to have told the authgrities that he had been employed as an usher at a theatre in this city and later worked as a special policeman at another theatre.

Although Reading and his staff are confident they have all members of the gang involved in the Waltham murder and holdup behind the bars, search is being made for another confederate, believed to have participated in the several robberies and other crimes laid at the door of Heinlein, Devereaux, Bennett, McLaughlin and King.

From District Attorney Reading's office it is reported that the prosecutor and his staff have accumulated ample evidence to convict at least three of the indicted men of first degree murder.

A total of twenty have been arrested thus far.

Ten suspects were rounded up during the night by Boston police in their drive on the underworld. The campaign was ordered by Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson.

The largest number of suspects were taken in by police of the East Dedham Street station, which is part of the South End district, and there officers corraled four prisoners.

Milk Street Station, came next, with the capture of two prisoners. Mattapan, West End, Dorchester and the Roxbury stations, each got one man.

COL. M'GUIGG IS LEGION HEAD

there has been too much speechmaking and too much scandalous conduct on Omaha's streets for which the legion could not disclaim entire responsibility.

Commander McQuigg has had an extensive career as a soldier and officer, serving in the Spanish-American War, on the Mexican border, and in the World War. He is fifty-nine years old.

He began his military career with entrance to Wooster College as a cadet and in the Spanish-American War served with the First Ohio Engineers, winning to the ranks of captain and major. In the Mexican border trouble he served as colonel.

In the great war, Commander McQuigg mobilized the 112th Engineers. He was wounded while in the Argonne. He was appointed brigadier-general of the Ohio National Guard and placed in command of the 73rd Infantry Brigade in the 37th Division.

With retirement to civilian life, Commander McQuigg became identified with American Legion work. He was elected commander of the Ohio department, serving from 1920 to 1921. He also served as a member of the National Executive Committee from 1921 to 1924, and is a member of the Frederick W. Galbraith, Jr., Memorial Committee and of the Legislative Finance Committee.

In private life Commander McQuigg is an attorney and banker.

Yes, but—
What About Persia?
Gas War "Barbarous"?
If So, We Need It

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1925, by Star Co.

IN HIS Omaha speech President Coolidge said, "No nation ever had an army large enough to guarantee it against attack. . . . No nation ever will." That is true, but while Philip of Macedonia and his son, Alexander, were building up their army, perfecting their methods, keeping prepared, great, powerful, disdainful, rich and swollen Persia—the United States of those days—didn't imagine what was going to happen, and never got ready.

THINGS HAPPENED rapidly when Alexander with 30,000 men swam across the river, attacked the power of Persia, scattered its vast armies, its line of war elephants, and hunted the Persian king to his death.

YOU CAN'T HAVE an army big enough "to guarantee you against attack," but you can keep yourself in such a condition of preparation so as to make attack improbable, and not dangerous.

If this nation continues accumulating money, ignoring the teachings of history, neglecting modern war methods, simmering complacently in its own financial grease, we may get a lesson such as the Macedonians gave to Persia, and the Japanese to heavy China.

ASIA, TOKIO, PEKIN are now about 40 hours from the United States by swift airplane. The fastest plane might cross the Pacific in 21 hours.

Twenty-five years ago the trip by water was two weeks, and an enemy invader would have been compelled to make a landing and find subsistence after landing.

NOW THE ENEMY would come through the air, and there need be no landing. Attacking airships would drop their cargoes of explosives and poisonous gases on a few cities, then fly back to a mother ship off shore or across the Canadian border, land and be held for the duration of the war.

MR. PRESIDENT COOLIDGE. More important than anything mentioned in your brilliant and thoughtful Omaha speech, is the importance of keeping this country PREPARED FOR ATTACK, and able to repel it.

The thing can be done, necessary preparations established and maintained, fortunately for our national program of economy, at little expense, far less than the amounts now squandered by incompetency, or worse, in the army and navy departments.

THE LATEST asinine, intensely dangerous proposition is that the United States should sign an international "protocol" forbidding us, pledging ourselves, against the use of chemicals, including poison gases and other gases, in future warfare.

NO NATION has yet signed the protocol. France de

Hub Woman Held as Slayer After 10-Day Chase

FLED AFTER DEATH OF FRIEND

Mrs. Sihnners Is the First in Years Accused of Killing One of Own Sex

For the first time in many years, a woman was arrested today for beating another woman to death in Boston.

The prisoner was Catherine A Shinners, 50 years old, formerly of No. 24 Eaton street, Charlestown, charged with the murder of Bridget Donnelli of Barton street, West End.

The woman was arrested on Brookline avenue, Brookline, by Captain James McDevitt, Sergeant Frank McNabb and Special Officer Edward O'Neil of Division 3 after a ten day's search.

CATHERINE SHINNERS

Arraigned in Municipal Court before Judge Burke, she pleaded not guilty and was held without bail for the grand jury.

The Shinners woman, who was arrested several years ago on a charge of stabbing to death a man in East Boston, was taken into custody after the death of Bridget Donnelli.

At that time it was stated the victim had died of natural causes and the prisoner was released.

Later the police learned the two women had engaged in a battle in the Donnelli home, and another autopsy revealed wounds not self-inflicted.

On the previous murder charge against Catherine Shinners, the grand jury returned a no bill.

MISS MARION YORK WEDS MARLBORO MAN

The wedding of Miss Marion Eliot York, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. York of No. 89 Cross street, Malden, and John Edward Colleary, son of Mrs. Mary A. Colleary of Marlboro, took place in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Malden. Rev. William F. Reilly performed the ceremony. Mrs. Mildred Caffrey, sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid and Thomas King of Marlboro the best man. The ushers were William R. York and Joseph Caffrey, brother and brother-in-law of the bride.

ROYAL PEN TO HELP WOMEN

(Photo by Kadel & Herbert.)

Queen Marie of Rumania, who has contracted to write daily for the Boston Evening American. She is the first royal personage to write for a newspaper regularly and her articles will be of especial value to women readers, inasmuch as the Queen will draw on her own rich experience of life for her articles.

ARMY PUTS LID ON MITCHELL SPEECH

Washington, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—The War Department decided today to refuse to grant Colonel William Mitchell permission to go to Baltimore, where he had been invited to make an address.

Washington, Oct. 9.—"I've been under coercion ever since I was ordered to Washington. Threats of court martial were hanging over me while I was testifying before the President's aircraft board. Do you think I'd give the Navy a chance to get statements from me that the War Department might use against me? Not on your life!"

That was Colonel William Mitchell's explanation for refusing to testify when summoned by the naval board of inquiry into the Shenandoah disaster.

"At first I didn't object to testifying, but Congressman Frank R. Reid, my counsel, did. He was right. A member of the general staff, Colonel Charles B. Stone, was in the room with a stenographer, prepared to take down my testimony to use against me.

"And no matter what I would have said, this navy board would have twisted it around, quibbled and put me in a bad light. That bunch doesn't like me or believe in my aircraft ideas, does it? You know it doesn't!

"As soon as we are through this court-martial, then I'll be glad to testify, and under oath. This morning, when Reid asked that I be permitted to read a statement before taking oath, all I wanted to read was a letter I sent to the adjutant general, and another to the board itself, asking the courtesy of being excused until my other trouble is over. Granted? Not on your life?"

Reil was even more emphatic in explaining why he caused Mitchell to ignore the summons which the board issued immediately after Mitchell refused to take the oath:

"Say, do you think I'd let my client be crucified by a modern Spanish inquisition? Oh, I know the navy claims they have power to have a witness punished who fails to qualify before one of their boards. The statute giving them that power reads 'any person,' but the attorney-general in 1893 interpreted that to mean 'any naval person,' Colonel Mitchell is in the army.

"They can ask the army to discipline him, but will they? They can get into a district court—and there I'll fight them to the finish."

Wall Paper and Cigaret Lead To Suits

Certain wall paper made Mrs. Etta Sussman of Quincy literally ill, she charges in a $20,000 suit filed today against the Henry Bosch Company of Boston.

Not looking at it, she explains, but feeling of it. She alleged it contained poisonous substances.

In another suit, filed in Dedham Superior Court, Louis, Gertrude and Shirley Gloss seek to recover $3,000 from Arthur J. Spellman for an alleged assault, one of the weapons used being a lighted cigaret, they say. Ella Silberstein of Boston sues Garrett J. O'Riordan of Brookline for $5,000. She says she stubbed her toe on a bag of cement near his garage and was hurt by the fall.

CONVICT STABS MAN; ENDS LIFE

Providence, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—John D. Silva, serving a four-year term in State's prison for assault with a dangerous weapon, today slashed and probably fatally wounded William Greenwood, another prisoner, and then killed himself before guards could overpower him and disarm him.

The attack occurred in the shirt factory, where both men were employed at a cutting table. Greenwood, serving four years for a break committed in 1923, comes from Pawtucket. Silva was living in Providence when sentenced.

M'CORMACK, AT 41, WILL 'SING TILL HE'S 50'

New York, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—John McCormack, Irish tenor, who, with Mrs. McCormack and their daughter Gwendolyn, arrived today on the Mauretania, denied cable reports from Europe that he contemplated retirement from the stage at an early date to live in his castle in Ireland.

"I do not plan to retire until I am fifty, and that means nine years of singing yet," he said. "I have no castle in Ireland, only a very simple cottage."

[illegible] denied that he ever said he would not sing over the [illegible] he would sing [illegible] businesslike proposition was put up to him.

"We should do in this country as they do in England," he protested. "Exact a tax from the purchaser of radio apparatus and that tax should go to a fund to compensate artists for singing over the radio."

THUGS SLUG AND ROB A ROXBURY GROCER

After pounding him over the head with the butt of a heavy revolver, two yeggs robbed Andrew Barber of $70 just as he was preparing to close his grocery and provision store at No. 73 Longwood avenue, Roxbury, for the night.

Two young men, one very tall and the other very short, entered the store. The tall one snarled, "Give us the money," and without waiting for a response, brought the gun butt down on Barber's head three times. The thugs rifled his pockets. Then they fled to a car waiting a block away, in which was a third bandit.

QUEEN MARIE JOINS AMERICAN'S STAFF

Queen Marie of Roumania, famous royal successor to "Carmen Sylva," is to become a daily contributor to the Boston Evening American.

Her Majesty will write a series of articles entitled "Queen's Counsel," discussing helpfully and humanly the problems of everyday life.

Out of her fifty years of rich experience, Queen Marie will discuss love, women, and the home and kindred topics.

Writing easily and simply, with humor and understanding, she will discuss the upbringing of the modern girl and other matters of interest to women.

IS VERY VERSATILE.

Like her predecessor, Queen Marie has found her best expression through her pen, having already a dozen volumes to her credit. These range from fairy tales for children to grown-up fiction with a deep philosophy of life.

It was the first time a royal person, a reigning sovereign, has consented to write daily for any newspaper.

Queen Marie has much to say and knows how to say it. Few women have had so rich a life, so varied an experience, so many human contracts with high and low, rich and humble.

LOVES TO WRITE.

Her Majesty has the greatest of gifts, human understanding, and has both the love of writing and the courage to write truth.

You are sure to find your own personal problems touched upon, your own thoughts put into words.

Queen Marie has had much experience as a princess, wife, mother of six children, war-worker sovereign and counsellor of a devoted people.

KIN OF KING GEORGE.

She is a cousin of the King of England, former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, a second cousin of the Prince of Wales, whose recent visit to this country is still remembered pleasantly, particularly in social circles in Boston.

Her Majesty takes pride in being a "self-made woman," and in this daily feature "Queen's Counsel" can be traced her development from a rather quaintly inexperienced girl to a personality of strength, of deep human understanding and of recognized place in world affairs.

"The Empress of the Balkans" and "The Prettiest Woman in Europe" are two of the titles which have been given Queen Marie, although she is fifty years old.

STILL BEAUTIFUL.

Her abundant hair, which ripples away from her face and is gathered into a knot at the back of her small head, is the color of ripe corn. Her eyes are very blue and her skin is remarkably fresh for a woman of her age.

Tall and with a fine figure, the Queen is always exquisitely gowned. She herself has described dress as "the very expression of woman."

Before she turned the head and captured the heart of Prince Ferdinand, the Rumanian heir apparent Marie, then sixteen, is said to have had a formal proposal from her royal cousin, now King George V.

TO VISIT U. S.

Her Majesty hopes to visit the United States at some time, and in a recent interview said:

"I should like to become acquainted with every sphere of life in America—to meet even very humble people. The humble man, I find, is just as well worth knowing as the man who moves the world. It is not only among the so-called great that I care to make my friends."

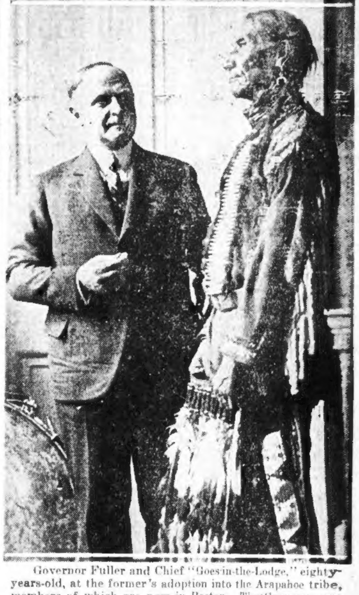
FULLER MADE CHIEF "RISING SUN"



Governor Fuller and Chief "Goes-in-the-Lodge," eighty-years-old, at the former's adoption into the Arapahoe tribe, members of which are now in Boston. The Governor was christened Chief "Rising Sun," to the accompaniment of the Indian ceremonial in the Executive chamber.

With solemn ceremony, Governor Fuller was today christened Chief "Rising Sun" and inducted into the Arapahoe tribe by a band of Indians in the executive chamber at the State House.

The Indians, fifteen in umber, headed by Chief "Goes-in-the Lodge," eighty years old, were dressed in native costumes, including the large feathered bonnets. After the Governor had greeted each member of the band, Chief Goes-in-the Lodge" placed his hand solemnly on the Governor's shoulder, and to the accompaniment of barbaric music and a ceremonial dance, admitted him into the tribe with the name Chief "Rising Sun."

Through one of the Indians, who acted as interpreter, the Governor welcomed them to Massachusetts and assured them of his respect for their traditions. The Governor recalled a phrase used by the late President Roosevelt—"The spear that knows no brother"—and declared it might well apply today.

SAVE-A-LIFE CAMPAIGN WINS SUPPORT OF MOTORISTS

SAVE A LIFE!

Autoists and children! Watch the Boston Evening American for the names of careful automobile drivers who have in mind the safety of their fellowmen, and cautious children who are inspired with the thought of self-preservation.

Ten automobile operators, who were selected by investigators for the Boston Evening American because of their thoughtfulness in regards to the welfare of others, were listed as winners of $20 gold pieces yesterday. Also, fifty "safety first" children, chosen from hundreds throughout the city by the investigators, won $2 each.

Today another list of safe and sane drivers, and sensible children appears in the Boston Evening American.

The Boston Evening American's Save-a-Life drive was inaugurated with the object of reducing deaths by automobiles which are yearly taking a tremendous toll of lives throughout New England.

In Massachusetts alone, the fifteen months' total of automobile fatalities was 938, and of those killed 605 were adults.

But the most horrible feature of this slaughtering of humans was the loss of 333 children; mowed down by two of the most disastrous of our present day perils—"speed" and "carelessness."

The Boston Evening American will present ten automobile license numbers and the names of the owners, who are entitled to a $20 gold piece, each day, and the names of fifty children deserving of a $2 award.

IDENTIFY SELF.

In order to obtain the reward due them all that is necessary for the drivers to do is to call at the office of the Save-a-Life Editor on the first floor of the New England Press Building, Winthrop Square, before 5 P. M., and properly identify themselves.

Children whose names appear in the list of winners published can claim their $2 reward at the same office, but they must be accompanied by older persons.

Seven days from the date of publication is the time limit set within which autoists and children may apply for their rewards. Numbers of auto winners who have not applied for their $20 gold piece will be repeated each day for a week, and names of the children winners for three days.

CLOSE WATCH.

Autoists throughout Boston and vicinity are being watched daily by investigators of the Boston Evening American who carefully observe the methods employed by the drivers in guiding their cars through the thousands of pedestrians on our streets, and other automobiles. Special attention is being paid to sections in the vicinity of schools where, above all other places, the greatest caution is demanded of drivers.

The same procedure is followed by the investigators in seeking out children who show the results of proper training in crossing streets. Mothers and fathers of the little people who are chosen by the investigators should be proud of them and thankful for the instructions they themselves or the childrens' teachers have given them.

As a result of the Boston Evening American's campaign a new and increased vigor has been instilled in those teachers, parents and policemen who are responsible for the protection of the child on the street.

At the Quincy School, Hudson and Tyler streets, a program of co-operation with the Boston Evening American has been outlined under the leadership of Miss Lilian E. Goodwin. Safety First literature, including cheering little poems and safety rules, is being distributed to the pupils in addition to the regular instruction in safe ways and means.

Near the Quincy School is also to be found Traffic Officer John J. O'Connor, of Division 4, who is proud of the fact that during his three years of duty there he has not had a single accident.

With this kind of co-operation the Boston Evening American's campaign will prove a tremendous success.

WATCH AMERICAN.

Autoists, drive with care and then watch the Boston Evening American for your name. Fathers and mothers, warn your children of the ever-existing peril awaiting them in the streets and look each day in the Boston Evening American for the appearance of the names of your children.

Evelyn Marble, 13 years, of No. 16 Mitchell street, the first child winner of $2 to apply at the office of the "Save-a-Life" Editor, sets an example for the children of Andrews School, Genesee street, near Albany street, where she attends.

This cute little "Miss" was discovered by a Boston Evening American investigator as she was crossing Genesee street, cautiously, on her way to school.

Dennis J. McCadden of No. 49 Marshall street, Medford, first auto winner to call at office of the "Save-a-Life" Editor, earned his reward because of his watchfulness in approaching pedestrians, and because he gave proper hand signals for stopping at Harvard Square, Cambridge.

URGES WOMEN TOILERS TO ORGANIZE

Speaker Tells A. F. of L. That Feminine Workers Are the Prey of "Baiting Bosses"

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 9 (A.P.).—A plea for organization of women toilers and the millions of unskilled workers was made before the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor today by Miss Elizabeth Christman of Chicago, fraternal delegate of the National Women's Trade Union League of America.

"Women do not work for pin money—not many women," she said. "They work to make a living, usually for others besides themselves. But they hold, as a group, the poorest jobs there are. It is safe to say that more than half of the wage-earning women in the United States today are paid less than $14 a week and most of those not more than $10. It is a far more serious thing to lose a $10 job than a $25 or $50 job."

Urging organization of the unskilled she said they "faced most acutely the hardships of unemployment, who have the longest hours and the lowest pay. They are the most easily intimidated by labor-baiting employers."

"Just as long as public opinion tolerates the employer who intimidates his workers," she said, "or discharges them for union membership, this group of workers will be hard to organize."

Collapses, Dies

Matthew M. Morris, 62, of No. 96 Maywood street, Roxbury, employed in the maintenance department of the Boston Elevated at Sullivan square, collapsed at work today. He was removed to the Haymarket Relief Hospital, where he died in about fifteen minutes. Death was caused by acute heart trouble.

'MOTHERHOOD' INSTITUTE FOR SMITH COLLEGE

Will Be Financed by Laura Spelman Rockefeller Foundation

Northampton, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—An institute for the co-ordination of women's interests has been established at Smith College, to be financed for three years by the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Foundation. Dr. Ethel Puffer Howes, a Smith graduate, is director.

President William Allan Neilson of the college defines its purpose as "to find a solution for the problem which confronts almost every educated woman today—how to reconcile a normal life of marriage and motherhood with a life of intellectual activity, professional or otherwise."

The program will include research and experiment, the charting of results, the development of principles and the demonstration of methods. One of the first problems to be attacked will be the discovery of methods of releasing women from wasteful occupations in their homes. A study will be made of community kitchens, co-operative nurseries, nursery schools, laundries, co-operative housing and garden city experiments.

"MODEL" BOY SLAIN; BOOTLEG, POLICE SAY

New York, Oct. 9 (I.N.S.).—His father's "model boy" but said by police to be a bootlegger, Nicholas Cironi, twenty-six, a chauffeur, was murdered here today.

Five or six shots were fired from across the street as Cironi was walking home. The shooting is believed to have been the work of a bootleg gang.

PLAN WELCOME TO M'MILLAN IN WISCASSET

Returning Explorers to Spend Tonight on Visit to Monhegan Island

Wiscasset, Me., Oct. 9.—The steamship Peary of the MacMillan expedition, reached here today several hours in advance of the Bowdoin.

The latter shipwas expected before night. Both ships enjoyed fine weather on their way down from Nova Scotia.

The crews of the two ships will spend tonight on the Island. Tomorrow they will sail for Wiscasset where a big home-coming reception has been planned in their honor.

Many friends and relatives of those on the returning ship left here this afternoon for the island to greet the explorers, and join them on the last leg of their journey.

Plans for the reception are still indefinite, owing to the fact that the Portland Rotary Club is attempting to get MacMillon as a guest in that city tomorrow.

INVITED TO PORTLAND.

He has been invited to motor to Portland immediately after arriving here, but it is thought he will decline the invitation.

The landing will be at the Wiscasset Custom House Pier, where the exercises will be held, under the auspices of a committee, of which Principal Charles Sewall of the high school is chairman.

The address of welcome will be delivered by Samuel J. Sewall, general manager of the Narrow Guage. Speeches will be made by Professor Philip Meserve of Bowdoin College and Governor Ralph Brewster.

The navy will be represented by Rear Admiral Dismukes, commandant of the Kittery Navy Yard, and the National Geographic Society by Dr. J. Howard Gore and Vice-President John Oliver Lagorge, one of whom will deliver an address. Dan Hoegg will represent the Portland Rotary Club.

RELATIVES ARE ON HAND.

Among the early arrivals of relatives of members of the expedition were Mrs. Mienrod A. Schur, wife of Lieutenant Schur; Mrs. John L. Reinartz, wife of the radio officer of the expedition, who has talked with him by wireless all the time he has been gone; E. F. Rigg, brother of Lineutenant B. H. Rigg, the geodetic survey man; Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, Jr., wife of Lieutenant Commander Byrd, in command of the navy personnel; Mrs. Maynard Owen Williams, wife of the staff correspondent of the National Geographic Society.

Mrs. R. B. Metcalf, daughter of Principal Sewall, plans to give a reception to the crews of the Bowdoin and Pearry, with fireworks, dancing and refreshments.

Two boxes of choice apples sent from Montsweag Farm by Charles H. Butler, former chief clerk of the United States Supreme Court, and Mrs. Butler, will be presented to the members of the expedition tonight.

F. B. Rawson, president of the board of directors of the Union Trust Company, Chicago, came here in his private car to meet his fourteen-year-old son, Kenneth, who was cabin boy on the Bowdoin.

VOLIVA SPEEDS AND COLLIDES WITH LAW

FAIL TO FIND POLAR PARTY

Montreal, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—"No trace has been found, either in Baffin Land or Greenland of the Nutting expedition." This message came over the air today from Inspector Wilcox of the Royal Canadian mounted police, who is on board the Canadian government steamer Arctic which is returning from a voyage to the Arctic Circle to relieve the police posts.

The Nutting expedition sailed from Norway June 24, 1924, on the American yacht Lief Ericcson in an attempt to cross the ocean over the old Viking route. The yacht was under command of William J. Nutting of New York. Arthur Hildebrand, John Todahl and Mr. Todahl and Mr. Fleischer, the latter a Norwegian, comprised the crew. The boat last was heard from early in September, 1924, when it left Julianhaab, on the southern shore of Greenland, headed west.

GERMAN "KLAN" IS BAND OF THIEVES

Berlin, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—A children's Ku Klux Klan, flaunting a white flag on which was painted a black cross, has been rounded up by the police. Its members, a thirteen-year-old girl, and seven boys about twelve, were charged with looting jewelry shops and department stores over a period of several months.

Members of the band, police said, saw the Ku Klux Klan mentioned in the newspapers. Without knowing its meaning, they decided it would make a good name for a banditis' club.

SMART SET'S WINNER IS 17

Just two years ago a pretty little Texas girl of fifteen said goodbye to her home folks in Dallas and set out to win fame behind Broadway's footlights.

A day or so ago this same girl sat smiling delightedly across a mammoth mahogany desk in the office of Will Hays, famous commander-in-chief of moviedom, listening to words of praise such as she had often dreamed of hearing—but hardly from so distinguished a source.

"I want to congratulate you heartily." Mr. Hays was saying "I hope this is just the beginning of your good fortune. The staff and motion picture industry is always eager to welcome new talent. On behalf of Smart Set Magazine I present you with this $1,000 check as the winner in Smart Set's November Cover Contest."

Maybelle Swor, of Dallas, had "arrived' in New York.

Miss Swor has golden hair, is blue-eyed and seventeen. She has already secured a place among Flo Ziegfeld's beauties and her $1,000 prize will be used to continue the singing and dancing lessons she takes twice daily.

Maybelle's mother and sister, with whom she lives were overjoyed at the news of her success. And back home in a Dallas high school is a brother who is proudly showing to everybody in sight a copy of November Smart Set with "Sis's" portrait on the cover.

LUTHERAN CHURCH REMAINS IN COUNCIL

New York, Oct. 9.—The executive board of the United Lutheran Church in America, in executive conference decided to retain its present "consultative relationship" with the Federal Council of Churches.

CHARGES HER EX-MATE WED ILLEGALLY

Although her husband was granted a divorce from her in 1923, Mrs. Catherine Burke, of No. 6 Peter street, South Boston, appeared in Suffolk Superior Court today asking alimony and support.

Mrs. Burke also charged her former husband, Edgar Burke, of No. 873 Huntington avenue, had married again before the divorce became absolute.

The woman said she needed $10 a week for the support of their child, Donald, six years old. At the present time Mrs. Burke told Judge Hall, she is earning $18 a week on which she has to support herself, the boy, and contribute to the support of her disabled father.

Through her counsel the woman told the court that the process servers were unable tot locate Borke, who is a typesetter.

Judge Hall ruled that the man must be brought into court to tell his story as to why he has not contributed anything to the support of his son, as charged by Mrs. Burke.

After talking with the boy Donald at the bench, he continued the case until next Tuesday.

Mrs. Burke charged her husband married Evangeline Doyle of Roxbury in Albany, N. Y., before the divorce which he had been granted became effective.

Boy Is Killed By Explosion in Throat

London, Oct. 9.—An amazing accident, unprecedented in British medical annals, resulted in the death of Laurence Sims, sixteen, at St. Mary's Hospital, Stratford.

During an operation on the boy's broken jaw there was a sudden explosion inside the mouth, producing an acute hemorrhage.

Sims had been put under an anesthetic, the surgeons using a mixture of ether and oxygen. For the purpose of trying the teeth for the operation, heated air was applied through a dental syringe.

FOURTH BODY IS FOUND IN TANK BLAST RUINS

St. Louis, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—Shortly before dawn today another body was borne from the debris, bringing to four the total fatalities of a refrigerating tank explosion in the ten-story Laclede Gas Light company's office building here. It was that of Bert Reynolds, thirty-five, an electrician, for whom searchers had toiled all night.

The bodies of Mrs. Anna Stoll, widow, a clerk; Cral Brewer, an engineer, and Armund Marquardt, maintenance man, were removed from the wreckage just after the explosion, which occurred in the rear basement.

The list of injured was today placed at 51. Most of the victims were employes who suffered from story Laclede Gas Light Company's of ammonia fumes. A few were burned by flames that followed the explosion.

Company officials are still seeking the cause of the disaster. The property loss has been put at $200,000.

MONSIGNOR FLYNN GETS HARTFORD PASTORATE

Flynn, chancellor and secretary of the diocese of Hartford, to be pastor of St. Patrick's Church, was announced today at the bishop's residence. He succeeds auxiliary bishop John G. Murray, who becomes bishop of the Portland, Me., see on Monday.

CIECHANOWSKI TO BE MINISTER TO U. S.

EPISCOPALIANS FAVOR REESE FOR PRIMATE

Diocese May Protest Vincent Resignation to Make Coadjutor Eligible

New Orleans, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—The first joint session of the House of Bishops and House of Deputies of the 48th triennial general convention of the Episcopal church in the United States of America was held today to hear the report of the national council.

The House of Bishops by a vote of 34 to 11 had approved the conviction of Bishop William Montgomery Brown on charges of heresy and affirmation of the verdict by a court of review. Bishop Brown, however, will continue to have a seat and vote in the House of Bishops until he is sentenced by the presiding bishop.

The House of Bishops heard a recommendation for fixing the annual salary and expense allowance for the primacy at $20,000.

A report that the presiding bishop, the Most Reverend Ethelbert Talbot of Bethlehem, had submitted to the committee the resignaion of Bishop Boyd Vincent of Southern Ohio was believed to indicate an effort would be made for election of the Right Rev. T. I. Reese, bishop co-adjutor of Southern Ohio, as primate. Bishop Vincent's resignation would automatically qualify Bishop Reese as a primacy eligible.

Many delegates saw in Bishop Reese a possible nominee for the primacy on whom support could be centered, providing strength apparently aligned with Bishop Gallor of Tennessee and Bishop Brent of Eastern New York, lacks a majority.

A possible hindrance to this was contained in the announcement that general dissatisfaction has arisen in Bishop Vincent's diocese over his resignation and that a delegation from the diocesan standing committee has been assigned a date for presenting a protest before the committee on resignations. The resignation of Bishop Julius W. Atwood of Arizona also has been referred to this committee.

'VAMPS' HUNT PREY IN HOTEL LOUNGES

"College Widows" and "Gold Diggers" Make Life Miserable for "Dicks"

The hotel lounge has taken the place of the university campus as a setting for the "college widow" to practice her wiles.

So says a house detective of one of Boston's leading hotels, who is stumped at finding a means of putting an end to the promiscuous usage of the hotel's property by nonpaying guests of this type.

The detective is frankly aghast at the task which grows heavier with cold weather.

"How am I to weed out the 'widows' and 'gold-diggers' when they look just like regular million dollar guests," he asks.

Visions of the bevies of beauties which will soon invade the warm lobby recalled to the detective's mind the old days when curfew was in vogue.

"Then it was easy to save money for the college lads," he said.

"Now it's all different. Young girls from sixteen years up, know all the twists and angles of the flirtation game and work it for all it's worth. I guess the parents of children have changed with times. They certainly aren't the old-fashioned people that I knew when I was young," he said.

So that's that.

LANSDOWNE'S WIDOW SCORES NAVY CHIEFS

Charges They Ordered Shenandoah West for Political Purposes

tried mast, my husband was very much opposed to this flight, and protested as vigorously as any officer is allowed to do to his superiors.

"My husband also felt that the Shenandoah, being our only fighting airship, should be treated like a man-of-war, used only for war problems, and should not be taken on commercial trips inland, simply to give taxpayers a look at their property.

In the case of a water-borne fighting vessel, the would not be taken to the Great Lakes in order to promote the interests of the people in the Middle West in our navy as a coast defense force. It could not be done in the case of a battleship and it has been proven that it could not be done in the cas eof the Shenandoah."

"Secretary Wilbur was quoted in the press as saying that my husband had made no protests against going at this time, and one of my reasons for appearing before this court is to emphasize the fact that my statement had been substantiated by official correspondence read into the court's record.

"The main points in this correspondence as I see them are all embodied in a letter to my husband from the chief of naval operations, dated August 2, 1925, in which the recommendations of my husband are disapproved as follows:

COURT ADJOURNS.

"Recommended that the flight be made at the end of the second week of September. Disapproved because the State fairs occur the first week of the month and must be flown over as scheduled.

"Recommended that a trial flight be made first to Detroit to test out the new mooring mast there before making the long swing around over the State fairs. Disapproved because its necessity was not apparent to the department, in spite of the definite reasons for the recommendation given as follows in a letter from my husband to the chief of naval operations, August 4, 1925."

The court adjoudned until Monday without questioning Mrs. Lansdowne.

National Hunt Club Steeplechase Features Day Expected to Be Replete With Thrills

Betty Alden

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, IS RED-LETtered on Myopia's calendar as the "Willowdale Races" day, when gentlemen riders on spirited thoroughbreds course over Hamilton and Wenham countryside in competition for famous trophies. All the events are very smart and very sporty (to use the hunting parlance), none more so than the National Hunt Club steeplechase.

IN YESTERYEAR SOCIETY flocked out to the Country Club for the "Races," always a happy occasion and recalled by horse lovers as having the National Hunt Club Steeplechase as a star attraction.

THE CARD FAIRLY BRISTLES with thrills. There's the Willowdale cup, the Turner Hill cup, the Myopia Challenge cup and the New England Hunts cup, and that veteran sportsman, Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., is in charge.

HE'S ABLY ASSISTED, of course, by other veterans of the turf, Myopians all. James W. Appleton, Master of Fox Hounds; Bradley W. Palmer, Gordon C. Prince, Bayard Warren, William Almy, Jr.; Frederick Ayer and Thomas G. Frothingham appear in the list.

OCTOBER'S BRIDAL PAGEANT goes on right merrily, Miss Anita Saltonstall Ward, dark-eyed daughter of the Robert DeCourcey Wards of Cambridge, and Professor Calvert Magruder in principal roles for the week's third ceremony of importance. Quite fittingly Appleton Chapel in the Harvard yard was chosen for bridal rites.

BOTH THE BRIDEGROOM and the bride's father are members of the Harvard faculty, and the latter gave the bride in marriage. For her attendants she selected gaily tinted frocks, deep sky blue for the honor maid, Miss Emma Lane Ward, and for the quartet of bridesmaids, apricot satin.

LACE FLOUNCES outlined the skirt hems, and there were large black velvet hats, while formal bouquets of roses, the golden yellow variety, completed the costumes. The bride's dark good looks were well set off with ivory chiffon over satin, the train alternate panels of rose point lace and satin, the veil of tulle.

TITIAN-HAIRED Mrs. Louis Butler McCagg, Jr. (aforetimes Katherine Winslow, daughter of the George Scott Winslows of Chestnut street), is coming over to be a wedding guest at the Woods-Pollard festivities next Monday, so I hear. The Winslow and Woods families (Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Woods are parents of the bridegroom-elect) have been neighbors on Beacon Hill for many years.

MISS ELIZABETH STEWART, maid of honor for Miss Priscilla Pollard, is but very recently back from a Summer in England, just in time in fact to join the processional which includes three sisters of the bride—Mesdames William A. F. Stride, Jonathan S. Raymond and Alvin F. Sortwell.

THE YOUNGER McCAGGS, by the way, are Newporters by Summer, putting in frequent appearances there as guests of the older McCaggs at their Gibbs avenue place. Newporters the year around, newly listed in that category, however, are the Herman LeRoy Joneses, who have taken and purchased a residence in Rhode Island avenue.

OTHER SUMMERS found the Joneses in Newport as tenants of Brent Lodge in Gibbs avenue, one of the establishments having Miss Ellen F. Mason as owner. Miss Ellen and Miss Ida Mason, of Walnut street, Beacon Hill, are Newporters of the older regime, putting in Summer after Summer at their lovely place, caring not a whit for the hectic round of society as followed by newer Newporters.

UNION OF METHODIST CHURCHES IS LIKELY

Chicago, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—The official vote of the Methodist Episcopal Church on unification with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, up to the present show more than the two-thirds necessary for unification of the two churches.

MEDIEVAL LAW FOR ITALY, AIM OF MUSSOLINI

Premier Is to Abolish Self--Government in Small Towns to Strengthen Facists

New York, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—The abolition of self-government in small municipalities in Italy is the latest step of Premier Msulolini in tightening the reins on supreme Fascist control.

The cabinet of the Premier, who recently made the pronunciamento that "liberty exists only in the imagination of philosophers who seek their unpractical philosophy from the skies," and "my philosophy is drawn from near the very earth, for those of the earth," has decided to revive and modernize a medieval form of government for small municipalities by the appointment by the Central Government of "podestas," which will do away with government by mayors elected by the people.

The podesa in medieval times was a sort of governor with extensive power. The aim in unseating the mayors and making the radical change of appointing podestas is the desire to remove from local governments personal bickerings in politics and the establishment of administrations for the benefit of all classes and incidentally for the benefit of the nation.

SCORES OF N. Y. FIREMEN KNOCKED OUT BY FUMES

New York, Oct. 9.—Damage of $100,000 was done and a score of firemen injured in a fire in a loft building here today. Clluloid fums incapacitated dozens of fire fighters.

Thirty telephone girls in a nearby building stuck bravely to their posts as the stifling fumes seeped through windows and doors. One fireman was badly cut by flying glass, but all other casu lties were confined to the effect of the smoke and fumes.

The blaze apparently began on the second floor and was followed a few minutes later by an explosion that burst through the roof.

WOMAN IN GANG THAT STOLE 40 MILLIONS

Nation-Wide Ring Operating on Payroll and Securities Forgeries

Chicago, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—Payroll and securities forgeries have cost American business men $40,000,000 during the year, said a report today of the National Surety Company.

The company warned against the operation of a ring, with national ramifications, headed by several of the smoothest confidence men in the country, with a woman as lieutenant.

Four concerns, three in Chicago and one in New York, have been victims of forgeries within the last six weeks, the report said. The Pullman company lost $100,000 in spurious pay checks, cashed in New York, Philadelphia and St. Louis; the Island Steel Company, Indiana Harbor, pay checks valued at $25,000; Albert Pick & Co., Chicago, forged stock certificates sold for $20,000, and the Mexican Petroleum Company, New York, interim certificates totaling $19,000.

All the losses were covered by surety bonds, the report said.

MILITARY FUNERAL FOR HYDE PARK AUTO VICTIM

Thomas J. Kilmartin, 35, World War veteran of 16 Emmett street, Hyde Park, died today at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital from injuries received a week ago in an automobile crash at Canton. Physicians had amputated his right leg to prevent lockjaw, but his condition was so weakened he failed to rally. He was the son of William J. Kilmartin, superintendent of streets of Hyde Park. He served in the Navy during the war and was a member of Fogg Post, American Legion. He will be given a military funeral on Monday.

COOK DELIVERS 'KNOCKOUT' TO 'GOO GOOS'

State Auditor, Candidate for Mayor, Spurns Invitation to Be Heard

Word came through today that the Mayoralty candidates were speeding up and a little later it was discovered that Alonzo B. Cook, State auditor, had speeded so speedily that he had crashed the Goo-Goos a terrible crash, leaving the Goo-Goos not alone mal de mer, but very groggy.

A week ago the Good Government Association, self-appointed stepfather and guiding light of city politics, invited the State auditor to appear before it with reasons for his candidacy and, if satisfactory, maybe a kiss on the chaste brow.

It appears, however, that Cook looks at this in the light of a kiss in the dark. In a nice polite letter to Secretary George H. McCaffrey, Jr., of the Goo-Goos today, the State auditor informed the body that he didn't think he'd appear—not while they noticed it.

"FAR BELOW IDEALS."

"While I am in entire sympathy with the ideals for which your association was founded, I feel that as a practical matter it has worked out very from the standard which those ideals set," Cok wrote.

The State Auditor said he preferred to place his case before the electorate at large—which, reduced to the least common denominator, is the boys that X the ballots at the polls and sometimes are a bit important in a political fight.

All the other candidates were speeding up today too.

Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn made an active canvass of the Forest Hills section.

Registrar of Deeds W. T. A. Fitzgerald was at the other extreme of the city, addressing a large meeting at Cushman Hall, Central Square, East Boston.

O'BRIEN PLANS PARADE.

District-Attorney O'Brien put in an intensive drive at home meetings in Roxbury, Dorchester, Jamaica Plain and at Dorchester spoke to a meeting of club women at Norfolk Hall, No. 328 Washington street.

His campaign committee has announced an automobile parade to be held Tuesday evening, next, starting at 7:30 o'clock from Brighton avenue, Brighton Centre.

Miss Francis G. Curtis, the only woman candidate for Mayor, is working hard among the women's organizations. Arrangements have been made to have Miss Curtis address all the various ward groups in the Boston League of Women Voters at a series of meetings, the first of which comes on Friday evening of next week in the Students' Union, No. 81 St. Stephens street.

Representative Thomas S. Kennedy of the Mission Hill district, whose name appears as one of the All-Party committee that is supporting Malcolm E. Nichols for mayor, issued a statement that he is not a member of the All-Party committee and that he is supporting Sheriff John A. Keliher for mayor.

INDICT CRIPPLE YOUTH AS SLAYER OF FATHER

Gilbert Richards, crippled Townsend youth, arrested September 28, after the shooting to death of his father, Fred Richards, was today indicted on a charge of murder by Middlesex County Grand Jury. The youth hobbled into Superior Court on crutches and when asked to plead to the indictment, remained mute. Judge George Flynn ordered a plea of not guilty entered and Richards was remanded to jail for trial. At the time of the slaying he was reported to have admitted to the police that he killed his father because the latter abused him.

"GAS" STORAGE PLANT ON PARKWAY OPPOSED

Residents of Sterling street, Fairfax street and Powder House boulevard, opposed the granting of a license to the McKenna Company to erect and use a building for the storage of gasolene on a lot on the westerly side of Alewife brook parkway, opposite Sterling street, West Somerville, before the Somerville Board of Alderman.

A petition headed by Agnes E. Frohock of No. 65 Sterling street, and signed by one hundred residents of the vicinity, was filed with the aldermen. The matter was referred to the committee on licenses and permits.

BLIZZARD SWEEPS NORTHERN ILLINOIS

Chicago, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—A blizzard was reported enveloping Ladd, Ills., today while other communities in Northern Illinois reported the first snowfalls of the season. Early season snow and killing frosts occurred in sections of the Middle West. Killing frost for Central Illinois was forecast by the Springfield Weather Bureau for tonight should the skies clear, while a killing frost occurred last night at Omaha with a new low record of 30 degrees there on October 9. Chicago experienced its season's first snow today.

"CON CONRAD" SANG, BUT NOT OF TRUE LOVE

SALEM MAYOR HEADS PHONE DEMAND

Danvers, Salem, Beverly and Peabody Seek 'Old District' Service

Thousands of telephone subscribers of Salem, Beverly, Peabody and Danvers are today awaiting a decision from the Public Utilities Commission on the question of restoring "old district service" in place of the newly imposed service.

Abolition of the new service was favored by more than 75 per cent. of the subscribers, according to the returns of referendum vote taken in the communities.

The "old district service" cost subscribers $2.75 per month. The new service as allowed by the recent decision of the commission cost $3 per month with five cents extra for each call from one district to another.

Leaders in the movement to bring about a reajustment of rates said that the commission now has the opportunity to respect the overwhelming desire of subscribers to return to the old service, by ordering the telephone company to cancel the new rates.

Anticipating probable opposition from the telephone company, Mayor George J. Bates of Salem, who is spokesman for the communities, is prepared to argue the reasons why the old service should be restored.

The commission has received the report of the committee that handled the referendum. No date for a hearing has been set as yet. Many subscribers were of the impression that a favorable vote on the matter would have resulted in the old service being automatically restored.

It was agreed that if any community votes "yes" on the new service, it shall stand. Subscribers in Marblehead voted "yes," thereby retaining the new service.

MANY CLEVER ENTRIES IN AUTO TEST

By PACKARD BUICK ESSEX.

A striking contribution to the Evening American's "Automobiles for 2 Cents" Competition which delayed the work of the examiners for a few minutes today, is written after the style of "The House That Jack Built," beginning with:

"This is the Boy, with his pleasing way,
Who brings our Evening American each day."

There are eight verses, on eight pages, and the writer has illustrated his offering with eight drawings in ink. It is all cleverly done, very cleverly done, and if it fails of high honors it most likely will be because the gifted writer has gone another 250 words beyond the 250-word limit.

The examiners report at least thirty leters from clergymen, twice that number of physicians, several from attorneys, many from schoolteachers. There are six hundred letters here well worthy of the closest attention of the Board of Judges. There are only three prizes, a Packard, a Buick and an Esex automobile, and the task of selecting the winners from amongst so many gems is sure to give the judges an extremely busy evening.

The work of preliminary examination is going on according to schedule and it may be that by next Wednesday all will be in readiness for final consideration.

AMUNDSEN TO USE DIRIGIBLE

New York, Oct. 9.—Undaunted by the failure of his Arctic airplane expedition, Captain Raold Amundsen will make another attempt next Spring to explore the North Polar regions from the air—this time with a dirigible. He made known his purpose today, when he arrived in New York on the Mauretania, to commence a lecture tour.

An Italian airship, renamed the Norge, has been acquired. Lincoln Ellsworth, Amundsen's American coleader on the recent unsuccessful flight, will go with him and they will have a crew of 15 men.

The Norge was at first offered the explorer free by the Italian government if he would fly the Italian flag, but was sold to him at a nominal price when he declined. It is being refitted with German engines in place of the Rolls-Royce motors with which it is equipped. Other changes in construction are to be made.

Hydrogen will be the inflation medium, helium being scarce in Europe. It is planned to have the Norge sail from Rome some time in May, take on gas and supplies at Fulham, England, then go to Spitsbergen, the hop-off point.

STARS REVEAL FORTUNE FOR O'BRIEN

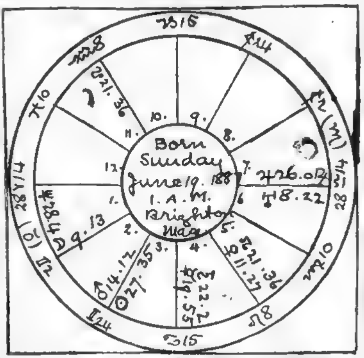
Forecast for Present Year More Propitious for November Than December

Mrs. Catherine Howard Thompson, of No. 199 Audubon road, who claims to her credit the prediction during the Wilson administration that when the Republicans came into power, Senator Harding would be elected President, has drawn up the horoscopes of the candidates in Boston's mayoralty fight.

These horoscopes will be printed from day to day in the Boston Evening American, and a comparison given by Mrs. Thompson, who among other successful prophecies, predicted in 1914 the ultimate entry of the United States into the World War.

The horoscope printed today is that of District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien.

SIGNS IN SKIES FOR O'BRIEN



THOMAS C. O'BRIEN
Born Sunday, June 19, 1887,
Brighton, Mass.

This gentleman is born with cardinal and changeable signs on the four angles of his nativity, and therefore he is to have many changes, and should rise above his birth and expectations and we believe that that time will come in the latter part of his life. He is born with the Sun in the sign of Gemini, which is a double-bodied air sign, and makes him very inspirational.

DUAL NATURE.

He possesses a dual nature, in that he can do several things at once, is affectionate, generous, and has a good deal of family pride; is fond of art and music, and could be a good public speaker. Mr. O'Brien loves knowledge, but is impatient of methods, likes to be busy all the time, but is inconsistent and in danger of extremes.

He is fond of color and flowers and everything beautiful in nature and art, is active, restless and anxious and must take good care of his nervous system.

He is happy and unhappy, satisfied and dissatisfied all at the same time. He likes to stay at home, and wants to travel abroad, will have many changes, and engage in several enterprises. He is somewhat suspicious and given to regrets, and is restless and demonstrative.

We notice that Jupiter the great fortuner, is retrograding in his seventh house which has to do with law, marriage and partners, and being in evil aspect to Saturn and the Moon, he will succeed best without a partnership.

All his planets being under the earth, the last half of his life will be, by far the best, and he ought to own real estate.

At the present time, Saturn the greater in fortune, is passing through his house of law, partners and strangers and at the end of November, 1925, makes a splendid aspect to Mercury, ruling his money matters, also letters, papers, trips and news.

Mrs. Catherine Howard Thompson, astrologist, noted for the accuracy of her political forecasts, reads the planetary signs of Thomas C. O'Brien as being propitious during November. Each of the mayoral candidates will be subjects for her horoscopes. To the right is today's subject, Thomas C. O'Brien, present district-attorney.

In December 1925 Saturn makes a splendid aspect to his own place, but we notice in the later part of 1926, Saturn makes an exact opposition to Neptune in his house of life, and he is seen disturbed, perhaps over money matters.

BEWARE DECEMBER

Jupiter the great fortune has just reached his [illegible] heaven or house of honor, and the middle of November 1925, it makes a splendid aspect to Venus and he benefits through the public or a lady, or through his own efforts. But the beginning of December 1925, Jupiter afflicts Mercury and at the end of the month also Saturn and he will feel quite disturbed and could almost hear of the death of a gentleman, or his father if living is ill, and at the end of the year, Jupiter afflicts his own place in the House of Law, partners and strangers and he will be much disappointed in a gentleman whom he knows, nevertheless something comes up at the same time, which gives him a great deal of satisfaction and he will have great success in his fortieth year, and possibly his forty-first.

We also notice in January, 1926, that Herschel is in very good aspect to Saturn, placed in the fourth house, ruling his home and real estate matters, and this will be felt again in May and October of the same year, and then something comes up which gives him great satisfaction.

ALLEGED HUB THIEF TO BE TRIED IN BUFFALO

Buffalo, Oct. 9.—Harry Polonski, alias Harry Harris, who is alleged to have been one of the ringleaders in the $150,000 daylight robbery of the jewelry store of Carl Skinner, No. 300 Boylston street, Boston, and a $12,000 jewel robbery in Smith Patterson's store on Summer street, Boston, will have to stand trial here on a payroll hold up charge before he is released to the Boston police.

Polonski was arrested in Detroit. He was immediately brought to Buffalo to stand trial with seven other men and women, who have been implicated in a series of holdups resulting in a loss of more than $65,000.

All's not so pleasant as it might be at sea. If it were the Cunard liner Carmania would reach Boston Saturday night and the Cedric by . . . But head winds have . . . lock until about 9 o'clock Sunday with the Cedric at the White Star . . . of Commonwealth Pier at 11 o'clock.

. . . clares that she will not sign. The French being intelligent will not put handcuffs on their own wrists, or hamper themselves in any way.

The Japanese will not sign that protocol. Their able chemists are carrying on intensive studies of chemical warfare, manufacturing poison gases, of all kinds at this moment.

IT IS PREDICTED, and there is unfortunately a basis for the prediction, that the United States WILL sign the protocol. If it does so, and if only ONE other . . . nation, Siam for instance, would also sign, the United States will be bound by word of honor to refrain from use of chemicals in war and to discontinue the chemical research and experimental work now carried on by our War Department.

SENATORS, inclined to approve the protocol, tying the hands of Uncle Sam, depriving him of the most important modern weapon, while leaving it to his enemies, are advised to read the little book "Callinicus," written by J. B. S. Haldane, an able English chemist who went through the war, in the trenches, got his share of gas, and understands the subject that he discusses.

CHEMICAL WARFARE, in addition to being MODERN warfare is the least brutal, most merciful form of war thus far devised by human brutality. Chemical warfare could render unconscious the inhabitants of a whole city, capturing without killing them. The old-style war was to burn the city, kill the men and women. The poison gases, so called, mustard gas, tear gas and other gases, are more merciful than powder or bullets, just as powder and bullets are more merciful than weapons of an earlier kind.

WHEN HANNIBAL fought, in Southern Italy, in 216 B. C., he killed 48,000 Romans in one day's fighting, his men using only short swords in the butchery.

This nation, during 17 MONTHS of the great war, lost the lives of 52,000 men only. Compare that with 48,000 killed in one day.

SENTIMENTALISTS that know little about war, using fanciful imagination instead of common sense speak of chemical warfare as "horribly deadly." They should consider facts. During the war among our men wounded by exploding shells, bayonets and other OLD FASHIONED weapons, 25 per cent died. Among our men gassed only 2 PER CENT died.

The gas does not kill, but can put whole armies out of commission.

IN THE BIG war entire regiments, made temporarily blind by tear gas, were taken prisoners and brought into camp, tears streaming down their faces, unable to see their way, with not a man wounded. Not one died, and the blindness did not last.

Only a sickly sentimentalist can call that kind of warfare "more horrible" than the old fashioned war that shot men to pieces and left them to die of festering wounds on the battlefield.

SENTIMENTALISTS feel toward chemical warfare the same aversion the old knights in armor felt against powder and bullets.

When Bayard the French "Crusader, without fear and without reproach," captured a soldier with a musket in his hands, the man was immediately put to death. He was considered unfit to be treated as a soldier in arms, because he carried an abominable, cruel, unsoldierly weapon.

THE ENTIRE subject is ably discussed by Haldane, a real authority, in the book "Callinicus," heretofore mentioned, published by Dutton & Co. This writer will send a copy of that book to each of the . . . Senators with a request to read it before deciding to deprive the United States by any protocol, or other agreement, of the right to do as it thinks best, if war is forced upon us, either with chemicals or otherwise.

MEANWHILE, the army's chemical department, concentrated on study of chemical warfare and chemistry generally, is engaged in work of value to the nation, APART from war.

We are not going to attack anybody, and should develop to the highest point every known method of warfare, including chemical warfare, to be ready for attack.

MEANWHILE, poison gases are to be used more and more in LEGITIMATE war, in fighting the boll weevil and the European corn borer, which has already appeared in several States, and might, if unchecked, blight the corn crop as the boll weevil the cotton crop.

THOSE MOST concerned with the program of economy, in . . . est nation in the world, . . . that for every dollar . . . the chemical department of the army, the farmer of . . . country will save ten thousand dollars and more.

OTHER NATIONS, undoubtedly would use chemicals at the beginning of any war, no matter what agreements they might have entered into, or they would begin using them, the . . . war turned against them. . . . country should not tie its hands or agree to limit its powers.

The fact is, and the author of . . . proves it, that chemical warfare is less barbarous compared with old fashioned war just as surgery with anaesthesia is less barbarous than old fashioned surgery when the patient was strapped down, to howl, as his leg was cut off.

Above all, chemical warfare is CHEAP. A few flying machines, a reasonable supply of gas, some explosives, for "moral effect," and any city is at the mercy of fliers. Every inhabitant could be taken prisoner without permanently injuring anybody.

DOES THIS nation, in order to please the sentimentalists who don't understand what they are discussing intend to leave the overwhelmingly powerful weapon, CHEMICAL WARFARE exclusively to the use of our enemies?

As well agree to use only Indian bows and arrows, because some . . . old lady thinks the machine gun is "barbarous."

PARKING IN P. O. SQUARE BANNED

Parking of automobiles in Postoffice square in front of the Postoffice Building, between Water and Milk streets, was today prohibited by the street commissioners.

The action was taken following an appeal by Postmaster Baker that the parking of automobiles at this point seriously interfered with the receipt of mail.

William J. O'Brien told the commissioners that the parking of cars in the centre of Postoffice square has overflowed to the curbs to such an extent as to become a nuisance.

The commissioners excluded commercial vehicles from Eustis street, Roxbury, between Adams and Dearborn streets, on an appeal of the residents of that district. Deliveries of merchandise will, however, be allowed.

SOMERVILLE ALDERMEN TO TRY PATROLMAN

Mayor John M. Webster recommends to the Somerville Board of Aldermen that Patrolman Leo J. Hurley be discharged. President John S. Smith, Jr., of the board set next Thursday evening as the time for public hearing. Mayor Webster stated that on September 28, last, Chief of Police Kendall filed charges of intoxication and inefficiency against Hurley and that after a hearing, he had found the patrolman guilty.

On last Monday Judge Sturtevant, after a hearing in the Somerville court, found probable cause in the case charging Hurley with drunkenness and held him in $100 for the November term of the Grand Jury.

Why?

Why do they call them "bulls" and "bears" on the stock exchange?

Like the old saying, "Don't count your chickens until they are hatched," there is one that "you can't sell the skin until you have caught the bear."

On the stock market in 1720 it became the practice to enter into contracts for transferring South Sea stock at a future time for a certain price. One set of brokers were intent on pulling down the price of the stock so that when they "delivered" the stock it would be at a lower price than the contract price, and they would therefore make the difference for their own profit.

Their actions in attempting to pull down the stock was likened to the bear that pulls down wild honey with his paws.

On the opposite side of the contract were a set of brokers who would profit if the stock was at a higher price at the time of "delivery" than the contract price—in other words, they would be buying at a price below actual cost. Their efforts were therefore directed toward boosting the price of the stock as much as possible, in the same manner that a bull assists an unfortunate traveler over the nearest fence.

From the days of the South Sea stocks the terms were used more and more in designating two sets of opponents on the stock market until "bulls" and "bears" are used daily in speaking or writing of the trading on the stock market.

Do you want to know why—anything? Ask the Why Editor, Boston Evening American.

On a day off and attending the Danbury, Ct., fair, Patrolman Daniel M. O'Connell of Somerville brushed up against a performer in a side show, knocking off his wig, and recognized him as Robert Bodoin, nineteen years of age, of Washington street, Somerville, who escaped from Concord Reformatory. Bodoin recognized O'Connell and tried to escape, but was arrested as a fugitive from justice and brought by auto to Somerville where he was turned over to reformatory authorities. Bodoin, police say, escaped September 5, last, with two others, who have been captured. A reward had been offered for Bodoin's capture.

She Mothers her Flock of Bean Pots

If you could see Mrs. Grady in the midst of her bean pots before the great ovens in the Waldorf commissary—if you could see her looking into each pot in turn, adding a little water here, doing something else there—with the pride of accomplishment in her every action—then you would know the reason for the fame of Waldorf baked beans!

For into these clay bean pots Mrs. Grady puts something more than the actual ingredients—she puts into them infinite care, love of her work, that constant effort for perfection which a famous home cook makes when in her own kitchen. And Mrs. Grady has been doing this at Waldorf for eight years.

Only beans of the best quality are turned over to Mrs. Grady for baking. Grown in Michigan and Northern New York, they are as perfect as can be in size, flavor and marrow fat content.

Every bean passes over a glass under which powerful electric lights reveal imperfection and foreign matter. These are removed; only clean and perfect beans enter the pots. The soaking, seasoning and baking is uniformly followed each day throughout the year.

Waldorf prides itself on the quality of the beans it serves. Eat them and know why!

BURIED ALIVE, BEGS 'SMOKE' ON RESCUE

Aged Teacher Lays Plight to "Vamp" Successors

A Thrilling Story of a Love That Sweeps Down the Barriers of Hatred and Defeats a Fiend's Plots

Here was something Rosemary could not understand. Twice before she had seen Jasper in these moods of violent passion, almost a savage, and she was utterly helpless to stop him.

PETER BLAKENEY, a carefree young man, is in love with Rosemary Fowkes, but he forgets to propose, and Jasper Tarkington wins her. Rosemary, a writer, is induced to go to Transylvania and arrange a series of articles intended to clear the air of much international unpleasantness. Instantly she finds herself in the midst of a group of plotters. Even her best friends are arrested as spies, and though her husband is a great help, he always seems to fail in his efforts. So Rosemary decides to watch and wait.

(Copyright, 1925, George H. Doran Company.)

CHAPTER XI.

ROSEMARY, being very human and very young, felt all the better after she had had a good cry. Presently she struggled back to her feet, dabbed her eyes with cold water, put powder on her nose and a comb through her hair. She did not want to look a sight when presently Jasper came back from his walk; and she told him all that had happened.

By the way, where was Jasper? Rosemary was just aching to review the whole situation with him.

As if in response to Rosemary's wish for his presence, Jasper presently walked in, full of apologies for having left her to face Naniescu alone. He sat down beside her on the sofa and took her hand, and one by one he kissed each finger.

Rosemary turned to him with a smile. There was no one in the world quite so kind as Jasper; his kind, grave eyes were fixed on her with such a look of adoration that instinctively Rosemary nestled closer to him like a trusting child, and on an impulse she told him everything.

But Jasper didn't say much. He did not even seem very attentive.

He put irrelevant counter-questions, and once or twice answered at random. His chief concern seemed to be that she, Rosemary, knowing the foolish game Philip and Anna were playing, had not succeeded in putting a stop to it.

Of course Jasper was right. But while Rosemary paid ungrudging tribute to his judgment, she felt more and more chilled by his total lack not only of sympathy, but even of attention, as if the matter of Philip and Anna's life and liberty hardly interested him.

She could almost hear Jasper saying:

"You can get quite near the truth in your articles and satisfy Naniescu and you will save those two hotheads from the consequences of their own indiscretion. Believe me you would be doing far more good that way to this miserable country than Philip ever did with his ill-considered articles."

Perhaps Jasper had actually said all this. Rosemary could not be sure. For the last few minutes her mind had been absent from her body. It had flown to a small dark corner in the crowded Albert Hall, with noisy jazz [illegible] buzzing in the distance like phantom melodies. She recalled every [illegible] moment of that night, every [illegible] stood out as a picture before her now: the dance with Peter, and then the box and the heavy curtains that shut her right out of the world—alone with Peter.

What sympathy she would have got from Peter if only he were here! And for the first time since her marriage, Rosemary allowed herself to think of Peter, to long for Peter, to mourn that which Peter had meant in her life: youth, humanity and enthusiasm.

Out of the Clear Sky

Suddenly she was brought back to Kis-Imre and to the reality of

PENSIONS IGNORED FOR THEM

Former Tutor Says Their Pay Demands Keep Her In Privation

In a meagerly-furnished South End room, a gray-haired woman, proud and aristocratic in bearing, sat with the recollections of her sixty-seven years about her.

The privations of her declining years are laid to the young teachers whom she calls "vamps," with their demands for higher pay that keep pensions on a low scale.

It was afternoon but neither breakfast nor lunch had passed the lips of the proud woman. In a few hours she would have "dinner"—a bunch of grapes.

Such is the life and subsistence of Boston's retired and pensioned school teachers without a private income—at least the life and subsistence of Miss Emma R. Gragg, retired now eleven years on a pension that is far less than an office boy's pay.

Apathetically in the [illegible] at times with a hint of bitterness—the elderly woman who gave her best life to public service for an ultimate reward of $32 a month for life from a grateful city, sketched to a Boston Evening American reporter her daily life and struggle for existence.

SEWS AND MENDS.

"I sew and darn and mend, shorten and lengthen my skirts, crochet, wash and iron and all the rest," she said. "These abilities keep me at least clothed in body if not in spirit. Then I do fancy work for friends—make collars and cuffs and earn a few extra dollars in that way.

"The pension gives me $32 a month and the Teachers' Mutual Benefit Association gives me $10 a month. On these amounts I live.

"We old ladies have been barbarously treated by the men—and the vamps. The new batch of young teachers seking all the money they can get, are to blame. Trough them teaching has ben made a business, and teh old professional instinct, the patriotism and privilege attaching to the old teaching profession has been lost.

SACRIFICED FOR CITY.

"We old teachers sacrificed all, and willingly took a cut when the terrible fire burned everything from Washington street to the waterfront, that these new 'vamps' might have free evening schools and free text books.

"Today these young 'vamps' are against us. Today I am called an old fol, an imbicile, because I seek justice and right, because I still hope before I die to know that all I gave my city was not in vain."

QUITS JAWS OF DEATH WITH GRIN

Man Buried Alive Spurns the Doctors When Saved; Jests and Borrows a Cigarette

Buried to his breast, beneath tons of sand, gravel and heavy rock, John Damery, forty-two, of No. 36 Burgess street, Dorchester, was rescued by furiously-working firemen today and calmly asked for a cigarette and match.

[illegible] down in a pit below the sidewalk [illegible] No. 51-53 Clarendon street, South End, the Dorchester man, employed by [illegible] J. Schreck & Co., contractors and owners of the building, was trapped for two hours before the gaze of hundreds who thronged to watch the rescue operations.

The Rev. Fr. William A. Dacey of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, summoned by police in the thought that Damery's hours were numbered, was standing at the edge of the trench as the rescued man clambered up a ladder unassisted.

"The joke is either on you or on me, Father," he said.

Damery's usual employment with his firm is as a roofer, and he has risked his life countless times while clinging to perilous heights. But it remained for a street trench down under the surface of the earth to finally grip him in a handshake with death.

Drainage pipes leading out from the Clarendon street house were in need of repair and replacement and Damery turned in versatile fashion from roofing to delving down below.

He was ten feet down under the surface when the sides of the hole caved in, carrying down tons of sand, gravel and boulders.

FIREMEN AID RESCUE.

Schreck and two other men, leaping into the trench, endeavored vainly to release him. Then they called the police and the crew of Ladder 13.

Hoists were raised, a block and tackle rigged and then Ladderman William Johnson went into the hole. With District Chief Daniel Kel[illegible] directing and Lieutenant Edward Montgomery and Ladderman [illegible] Sullivan [illegible] the department's strong men, working on the [illegible] rescue work was started.

Boulder after boulder was noosed with the end of the tackle rope. Slowly, carefully, they were [illegible] lifted away from the entrapped man.

Finally, when enough debris had been removed to allow Damery's release, the latter moved [illegible] and climbed up the ladder [illegible]

INFANT SLIPS, IS KILLED BY WAGON

Within a short distance of her home, which she had just left, Evelyn B. Wambolt, sixteen months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Wambolt of No. 5 Marvin place, was killed when a wagon of the New England Bakery Company passed over her after she had slipped beneath the rear wheels.

The little girl, who was accompanied by her sister, May B., aged four years, had just left her home, and, according to the police report, was seated on the curbstone a short distance from her home when the team passed over her.

She was taken to the [illegible] Hospital by a passing automobile, but was pronounced dead upon arrival.

The bakery wagon was driven by Elmer S. Packus of No. 4 Capin street.

The girl is the youngest of five children.

DIVORCEE ASKS $50,000 OF IMPORTER

Surprises are promised by John D. Canalas, wealthy wholesale spice importer who has been sued for $50,000 in a breach of promise action by Mrs. Genevieve Evans, when the case comes to trial in Superior Court.

Canalas claims he made no promise of marriage during their several years' friendship. It was just another case of "platonic love," he says. According to a statement made by his lawyer, Nicholas Loumus, Canalas met Mrs. Evans several years ago in New York soon after she had been granted a divorce from her first husband.

Both Canalas and Mrs. Evans are thirty five years old. He came to this country from Greece twenty years ago and has been engaged in the importing business for many years. He is located on South Margin street.

Common Sense in Neighborhood Toll Service

There are nearly 500 centrals in this territory. There are 12,000 to 13,000 operators. For every operator to know every office is no light requirement.

Take central office names in the larger cities. A Forest (Portland) girl is not gravely at fault if Cedar does not instantly suggest Worcester,—or Walnut, Springfield. The most Angell-ic operator in Providence might not instinctively recognize a Breakers call as Lynn-ward bound. Clearly, "Worcester-Park," "Providence-Broad," "Springfield-River," is the way to place such calls.

There is, too, the exchange name which, for one good reason or another, differs from that of the town or city served. "Ocean" may well baffle an inland operator; or "Mystic" spell mystery. "Boston-Ocean," "Boston-Mystic," is the better form.

Again, town and city names are often duplicated in New England. As an extreme example, our operators must choose among four Newports unless you name the state.

All this, however, is merely incidental—just a few hints to help you make of our Neighborhood Toll Service the most efficient use.

Eastern Teams to Present Strong Aerial Attacks in Saturday's Games

New York, Oct. 9 (A.P.).—Gridiron warriors were on edge today awaiting the opening gun which sets off the big Eastern college elevens in their first real test of the season. Thus far, the stronger squads have participated in warm up skirmishes only. Results of tomorrow's struggles should furnish a definite line on what the teams can accomplish.

One of the headliners will bring together the Georgia Tech and Penn State machines in their annual intersectional classic at the Yankee Stadium. Governor Walker of Georgia and Mayor Sims of Atlanta are to see the game.

Coach Lou Young and his Pennsylvania squad are [illegible] pared for battle with Brown.

Bill R[illegible] eased up on [illegible] limiting the Tiger workout to fundamentals and a signal session. Princeton faces Washington and Lee.

Coach Bob Fisher will start his first Harvard eleven against Middlebury. The Crimson coaches have revamped their offensive and are anxious to see what the team can accomplish. Coach Eddie Mahan has returned to the staff after nursing an injured foot.

The Crimson coaches feel no anxiety over the meeting with Middlebury. Leo Daley, who has discarded his crutches, will probably join the squad in practice [illegible].

William and Mary will send a powerful eleven against Syracuse in [illegible] banner [illegible] Reports indicate that the [illegible] outweigh the Orange players by [illegible] pounds per man.

MALONEY-SOLOMON TO BATTLE TOMORROW

BIG BOUT DELAYED BY RAIN

anxious for the sound of the gong which will send them into action.

RECORD ADVANCE SALE.

Goodwin stated that the advance sale of tickets has already passed the $12,000 mark and that with any kind of a break in the weather tomorrow that the gate should total $30,000.

The weather contest for tomorrow is fair and cooler, which means that Solomon and Maloney will probably be able to settle the question o ring supremacy.

Solomon still remained a 10 to 6 favorite in the betting today.

Come on you Jim Maloney. Snap into it King Solomon. Settle for all time the question of ring supremacy as you battle in your ten round bout at the Suffolk A. A. fistic carnival

The intense excitement of the World's Series and the roar of the football crowds will be forgotten as Dynamite Jim of South Boston and the colorful King from far away Panama leave their corners at the sound of the gong and start sending tremendous punches through the air

The meeting between Maloney and Solomon is New England's battle of the century. It overshadows in public interest any boxing bout ever held in this section of the country.

THE dramatic ending of the last Maloney Solomon tussle is what has given this bout such a strong appeal

[illegible] supremely confident. He had previously outpointed Solomon in a close bout and felt he knew how to defeat the King in more decisive fashion

The first round was even, while in the second frame Maloney had a big margin. He had Solomon backed against the ropes at the bell

Came the third round with all of its intense excitement and the thrills of a Dempsey Firpo slugfest.

Solomon nailed Maloney with a right hand shot to the chin as the latter was backed against the ropes. Jim fell to the canvas as if the heavens had dropped upon him. He was there fully fourteen seconds, though the referee only counted to nine. Then Maloney struggled to his feet.

Solomon opened up and let loose a terrific fusillade of punches. Maloney fought back as best he could. A bell then tingled Neither of the boxers heard it. Neither did the referee. The men fought on in all fairness.

Suddenly Solomon's right hand shot to Maloney's chin and the latter dropped to the canvas, crushed, completely out. As the referee started to count, Harry Kelley, Maloney's chief second, called attention to the fact the blow had been delivered after the bell. The referee took the Kelley decision and declared Maloney a winner

Solomon intends to avenge this ruling tomorrow. He will go into the ring determined to defeat Maloney so decisively that there will not be a chance of the South Boston heavyweight hiding behind any technicality. A big bell will sound at the beginning and ending of each round. The officials of the Massachusetts Boxing Commission will be in there under instructions to see that the best man wins.

SOLOMON is picked to gain the award The speculative element has made him a 10 to 6 choice.

Over in South Boston, though, there are more than 100,000 good citizens who are not only rooting for Maloney to come through with a victory, but who are confident that Dynamite Jim will live up to their fondest hopes.

Maloney has trained for tonight's contest as if a king's ransom depended upon the outcome of the conflict. He realizes that if he is defeated that he will lose all chance of reaching the pugilistic heights for several years, that he will have to start at the bottom once more.

Ring reputations will be made and shattered at Braves' Field.

Who will be the fortunate young men?

Your guess is as good as ours.

PLAYING SECRETS OF Famous Football Stars

No. 3—Told by CAPTAIN NEVERS, Fullback—Leland Stanford

To ED THORP, Famous Player, Coach and Referee

THE backfield player of today may be of any weight, because backfield [illegible] so numerous and varied [illegible] essential, however, to have one heavy man among the quartet. [illegible] Captain Ernie Nevers, Leland Stanford fullback [illegible]

HE NEVER PLUNGES BLINDLY INTO THE MASS, BUT SLICES THROUGH SMALL OPENINGS

Nevers is one of the greatest line [illegible] when going through an opening. He [illegible] his opening with rare judgment and seldom plunges blindly [illegible]

Give the Leland Stanford captain the ball and a [illegible] of an opening and he is sure to gain two yards or more. He is the type of player who fights for the last inch and is exceptionally hard to stop. [illegible]

Nevers [illegible] in the open [illegible] down as [illegible] man on the gridiron.

Nevers is also very [illegible] as an [illegible] performer because of his speed and [illegible] Nevers is an expert [illegible] one of the longest punters on the Pacific Coast.

On the defence the Leland captain carries the brunt of the work on account of his size and extremely hard tackling.

Experience in basketball, which is becoming better appreciated as an aid to football, makes Nevers a strong defender against forward passing attacks.

O'Connell is [illegible] his fourth season at Boston College and he should be one of the most talked of ends in the country before the end of the gridiron season.

As the 1925 Boston College team is a green aggregation, it will be impossible to get a line on their power until late in the season. There is nothing but hard work in front of the Boston College players and [illegible] if they are to [illegible] with Holy Cross [illegible] this season by the greatest outfit the Purple has ever had.

Attleboro, Oct. 9.—The final game of the baseball series between Attleboro and North Attleboro, scheduled for Saturday will not be played, it was announced at a conference by Managers Danny O'[illegible] and Frank Kelly. Financial conditions and lack of interest on the part of the fans is given as the reason. Attleboro had won [illegible] games.

Rain Prevents Third Game of Title Series From Being Played

"war correspondents," and camp followers but it was hailed as a distinct boon by the Washington Senators, facing the renewal of their battle on even terms with the Pirates so far as victories and defeats go, but carrying handicaps otherwise.

Chiefly beneficial to the world's champions is the fact that the added day of rest may find their star third baseman Ossie Bluege recovered fully from the effects of being hit by a pitched ball yesterday, and able to return to his post by tomorrow.

Physicians attending Bluege were a bit doubtful of this today, but at any rate he is counted upon to return by Sunday, so that he would miss only one day from the field instead of two.

This was announced after physicians had examined the player, who returned here with the Washington club overnight and was taken to the Wardman Park Hospital.

WILL TAKE X-RAY.

No alarm is felt over Bluege's condition, nor is any concussion or other ill effect feared, but complete rest and quiet has been ordered for him as a precautionary measure.

As a further safeguard, an X ray will be taken this afternoon or tomorrow morning to discover whether the blow from Vic Aldridge's fast ball caused any damage that has not yet become apparent.

Buddy Myer, Southern League recruit, who substituted for Bluege yesterday, will fill the third base post until the regular guardian returns.

Washington's veteran pitchers Walter Johnson and Stanley Coveleskie, also will profit by the extra interval and be prepared to get back into the fray sooner than called for under original plans.

Now, with three days' rest, Johnson, victor in the opening game, would be prepared to go back to the box in the fourth game Sunday while Coveleski would likely be fit to attempt to square accounts for his reverse by taking the peak in the fifth contest Monday, which now will find the teams in Washington under the shifted schedule.

The delay also will benefit Pittsburgh's sharpshooters, Lee Meadows and Vic Aldridge, who twirled the first and second games in their home port but the Pirates are confident they have a pitching ace or two yet up their sleeve in Yde and Kremer, while Bucky Harris is placing his main dependence upon the two veteran stars, "Covey" and "Barney" Johnson.

Kremer, slated to have pitched today for the Pirates, is expected to continue as first choice tomorrow, with Harris likely to depend on another seasoned right hander, Alex Ferguson.

Today's postponement is the first in the World Series since 1921, when rain prevented one game between the New York Giants and Yankees in their first all-metropolitan series.

The record for postponements was set in 1911, when championship play between the Giants and Athletics was interrupted for an entire week in Philadelphia.

The drizzling downpour gave promise of lasting the better part of the afternoon, but the official forecaster promised that it would clear by tonight and remain so for the next three days, with snappy Fall temperature as an accompaniment.

Legion Convention Mourns 'Matty's' Death

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 9—The American Legion National Convention took official cognizance of the death of Christy Mathewson. Unanimously the following resolution, submitted by Francis J. Good, commander of the Department of Massachusetts, was adopted by the convention:

"Whereas divine providence in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to place the hand of death upon our beloved comrade, Christy Mathewson;

"Now therefore, be it resolved by the American Legion in national convention assembled:

"1—That in the life of our late comrade the best attributes of true [illegible]hood were exemplified, and that in his death we lose a comrade of great worth and unimpeachable character, and the Nation an exemplary citizen, whose life will ever serve to inspire the American youth and whose traits and ideals will ever serve as an influence for much good among the people of our country.

"2—His unselfish conduct, his unswerving devotion to the spirit of fair play, his constant appreciation in his peculiar position of the value of righteous living, a characteristic of the life of this soldier and gentleman, shall ever suggest emulation of those high ideals of his comrades and the citizens of this Nation alike, and shall therefore result in a sturdier, healthier and cleaner America.

"3—That these resolutions be spread upon our records, ever to remain as an acknowledgement of his sterling character and the beauty [illegible] occasioned by his death.

"4—That we extend to the immediate family of our dear comrade the earnest condolences of our organization and offer prayer that the Almighty will furnish them strength to sustain them in the dark hour of death."

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Maker of 61 Golf Champions. "Golf's Most Successful Teacher," Says Chick Evans.

TRY TO CONTROL THE BALL NOT MERELY TO HIT IT

Golf never delivers the full volume of its charm as a sport to a player who is content merely to hit the ball. This fact is [illegible] understood by thousands of so-called golfers. When [illegible] golfer happens to connect with the ball [illegible] and [illegible] gets [illegible] of the [illegible] generation [illegible] the [illegible] pleasure [illegible] game [illegible] doing [illegible] the hint correctly. The real charm of golf is learning the swings for in this sport the swing is everything. [illegible] There is nothing else that the clubhead can do. Just how he is going to hit it—that is, with what exact effect—is the fire that makes golf many times more interesting to him than it can possibly be to the player whose whole concern is merely hitting the ball.

Bucknell Adds Tribute to Matty's Memory

Lewisburg, Pa., Oct. 9 (A.P.)—Citizens of Lewisburg and officials of Bucknell University, from which institution Christy Mathewson was graduated with the class of 1902, paid high tribute to the memory of the famous pitcher.

President Emory W. Hunt of Bucknell delivered a [illegible] eulogy at services in the college chapel and arrangements were made for the student body to meet the funeral party when it arrives here tonight from Saranac Lake.

At the football game between Bucknell and George Washington University on Saturday, flags will be at half mast and a bugler will sound "Taps" prior to the start of the contest while the spectators stand with bowed heads for one minute.

SCALPERS FINED HARD GOING IN SMOKY CITY

Pittsburgh, Oct. 9 (A.P.)—Hard luck has hit twice at the scalpers who operated here during the first two games of the World's Series. Not only have fifteen of them been arrested, but all agree that business is bad.

"Pittsburgh is the toughest job I ever tackled. I'll be lucky if I break even on the series," one of those arrested told police.

Of the fifteen arrested, nine were discharged and six were awaiting hearings today.

WE have maintained our reputation for Style Leadership for more than 30 years by keeping in close touch with our representatives in the principal Style Centers of Europe and operating 60 Style Stations in the principal cities of America.

You all remember when we introduced the Square Duck-Billed French Toe and later made the Heavy English Brogue Wing Tip popular all over this country. And last Spring we originated a Featherweight model that was copied by everyone.

This Fall it's Stylish to be Comfortable, because the most pronounced style tendencies in men's shoes are Broad Toes and Short Vamps. And our most extreme Short Vamp Broad Toe—is a regular "He-Vamp" with wide trousers.

[illegible] THE GREAT [illegible] OF THE AIR

RADIO TRADE IS STABILIZED

By ALBERT B. AYERS

An interesting development now prevailing in the radio industry is the rapidly growing determination of the better class jobbing houses to handle only the products of manufacturers who have a staple merchandising policy.

New models invariably attract a lively amount of interest and the question of discounts is always a factor, but both of these phases in the business have been almost entirely subordinated to the more important query "what is the policy of your organization."

BUYER DECIDES

I do not believe the "fittest" in the radio industry means the firm now making the biggest noise. When you come down to brass tacks its the radio buyer who will make the final decision. A man, purchasing well known radio equipment that doesn't give him entire service becomes a knocker, and a hard knocker, for the firm that has taken his money without giving him just return.

Again, the man victimized by the lure of gigantic sales, is bound to tell his experience to his neighbors his club members, the chaps he meets every day while commuting and his business associates. He throws a full grown wrench into the wheel of the next gigantic sale.

On the other hand, the man who gets into his home a receiver that gives unadulterated pleasure to himself and family is a booster. He shows off his instrument, actually demonstrates it to dozens of prospective buyers. He is the chap who decides on the fittest and his decision will go to the firm giving him the best service.

STANDARDIZING.

Jobbers and dealers are finding it more and more [illegible] every day to determine [illegible] they will feature. Hereafter they must be guided in their selection of radio by first the policy of the firm, the quality of their products, their ability to keep up production and last, but by no means least, the stability of their merchandise.

In today's unsettled and chaotic market the standard of any manufacturing organization must have a good clean-cut merchandising schedule. It is obvious that a finely built piece of apparatus, widely advertised, sponsored by a large and wealthy manufacturer, promptly loses every vestage of the favorable advantages it has achieved when the manufacturer liquidates his stock on a declining market at prices representing less than lowest manufacturing cost.

STILL AHEAD.

The New York Shows brought out no radical or startling new discovery in radio and the conventional five tube neutrodyne receiver is still far in the lead with both public and trade approval. Analyzed, the reason for this can be summed up briefly—Stability.

In stability and constant satisfactory operation and reception the neutrodyne, at present, is in a class by itself. In my opinion, the Eagle model F, neutrodyne, is the solution to the ever increasing problem confronting the big-city fan in the matter of selectivity. Almost every big city is already overcrowded with broadcasting stations of more or less power. The quality of their programs is steadily improving, as is there broadcasting equipment.

AIR JAMS.

But they are jamming the air and making it hard for the owner of an ordinary type of radio receiver, which is limited in its capacity, to separate one from another. It means that for radio at its best City-Radio fan must procure a super-selective receiver, one that is capable of cutting through these local stations an securing distant reception with satisfactory loud speaker volume.

For the fan in the more isolated sections of the land the Eagle is most efficient.

One of the many outstanding features of the Eagle model F is its excellent performance in registering the low meter stations which can be brought in with great ease. The new [illegible] is designed for a power tube, which also adds greatly to its ability to satisfy the most descriminating fan.

Big Stations Broadcast World's Series Play by Play

Today and continuing until the World Series is decided, practically every large radio station will broadcast the details of the World's Series games at Pittsburgh and Washington. Most stations will receive the reports by telegraph and relay them on the air. A number, however, have connected up on a direct wire into the ball parks and not only the description of the games, but also the yells of the crowds, etc., will be transmitted on the microphones. Stations on this hook-up are WEAF, WJAR, WEEI, WCAE, KDKA, WCAE, WCAP, WCTS, WBZ, WLW, WGY, WTIC, WMAQ, WGN. Other stations who have definitely announced World's Series broadcasts are WLS, WEBH, WHT, KYW, KPRC, KOA, KPO, KFI, WAHG, WJZ and WCCO.

Games will start 2 p. m. Eastern time; 1 p. m. Central time.

29-INCH WAVE LENGTH USED

Iowa City Ia., Oct. 9.—A wave length of about one four hundredths, the length used by the large broadcasting stations, has been produced by Winfred W. Salisbury of Iowa City, working with the radio department of the University of Iowa. He has also successfully operated the shortest wave length that is recorded for an amateur.

Using laboratory methods Mr. Salisbury produced a wave 74 centimeters, or approximately 29 inches in length. The wave used by WSUI, University of Iowa station, is 484 meters in length, or about one third mile.

In regular out-door experimental work, Mr. Salisbury has produced a wave length of 1.3 meters, or a little over four feet, and with this he has successfully broadcast on a short radius.

Naval radio experts have found that shorter lengths are advantageous [illegible] and [illegible] general use [illegible] results at night.

Among other studies that Mr. Salisbury is now conducting under Carl Menzer, University of Iowa broadcaster, and D. H. Menzel of the physics department, are his efforts to find an intermediate length that will be advantageous for both.

AIR RALLY ON TOMORROW

Plans for the gigantic Political Air Rally to be held on Saturday evening by Station WNAC are practically completed. The ten-minute speeches by the candidates for Mayor of Boston, twelve of whom have accepted thus far, will be divided by music played by five different orcestras.

The broadcast will start at 8 p. m., with a number of the concert orchestra from Yoeng's Chinese-American Restaurant, under the direction of Harold Sawyer. Later in the evening Jimmie Gallagher and his Checker Inn orchestra will play as will Ray Stewartson and his orchestra from T. D. Cook's Russian Amber Room, and Bill Boyle and his Copley Plaza Orchestra.

At midnight, Jimmie Hooley and his orchestra will take the air to wind up this epoch-making broadcast. One more candidate has accepted the invitation to be present in addition to those already given. He is Dr. Walter G. McGauley. The new candidate who has entered the field, Joseph O'Neil, has also been invited to speak on Saturday evening.

A FEW FALL FOOD FANCIES

FALL and fritters somehow seem to go hand in hand and I have some recipes for you today that I hope you'll enjoy one of these crispy days.

First, and a little out of the ordinary—

Recipe No. 1674

TOMATO FRITTERS.

2 cups tomatoes.
Bit of bay leaf
4 tablespoons butter.
4 cloves.
2 tablespoons chopped onion.
2 tablespoons chopped red pepper.
½ cup cornstarch.
1 egg.
1 teaspoon salt.

Melt butter; add onion and pepper, cook 5 minutes, add cornstarch, tomatoes, cloves, bay leaf and salt. Cook until thick. Strain. Add beaten egg. Cool in buttered tins. Cut in any shape desired. Dip in crumbs, egg and crumbs, and fry in deep fat.

Equally delicious are—

Recipe No. 1675

RYE CAKES WITH HONEY

2 cupfuls sour milk.
2 cupfuls rye flour.
¼ teaspoonful salt.
1 teaspoonful soda.
2 eggs.
1 cupful strained honey.

Dissolve the soda in the sour milk, add rye flour and salt, thus forming a thin batter; beat well and add the eggs well beaten. Add honey and bake on a well-greased hot griddle. Serve with butter and more honey. If too sweet, let honey may be used in the batter.

We read much about southern "Spider" cakes, but there is really no mystery about them. Just follow this recipe—

Recipe No. 1676

SPIDER BREAD.

1 cupful cornmeal.
½ cupful rolled oats.
1 teaspoonful soda.
1 teaspoonful salt
2 eggs.
2 cupfuls sour milk.
2 tablespoonfuls shortening.

Mix the dry ingredients, add the eggs well beaten and the milk. Melt the shortening in a frying pan and add to the mixture. Heat pan and turn in the mixture. Cook on top of the stove 3 minutes. Place in a moderate oven and cook 15 to 20 minutes. Serve hot, with butter.

Walnut pancakes bring "flapjacks" into the province of company fare. They are really excellent by this recipe—

Recipe No. 1677

WALNUT PANCAKES

1 cupful bread flour
1 teaspoonful salt
1 teaspoonful soda
½ teaspoonful baking powder
2 cupfuls sour milk
2 teaspoonfuls melted butter
¼ to ½ cupful broken walnut meats.

Mix and sift the dry ingredients together, add milk to make a batter the consistency of thick cream. Add butter last. Pour from end of spoon on a hot well oiled griddle. Scatter nuts over each cake at once. Brown and turn as usual. Serve with hot syrup.

And for a hearty casserole dish of new and delicious flavor try —

Recipe No. 1678

SCALLOPED RICE WITH OLIVES AND CHEESE.

2 cupfuls cooked rice.
1½ cupfuls milk.
3 tablespoonfuls flour
3 tablespoonfuls margarine
½ teaspoonful salt
1 very small onion
¼ teaspoonful pepper.
Few grains cayenne pepper
⅛ teaspoonful paprika
1 cupful cheese.
24 stuffed olives, sliced

Make a white sauce of above proportions of milk, flour and margarin. Add cheese, olives, seasonings and grated onion. When cheese is melted pour over rice in casserole and bake ½ hour in a moderate oven.

TALKING TAPE HOPE THE PERFECT RADIO AERIAL

LAST NIGHT ON THE AIR

By THE LISTENER.

Two exceptionally fine instrumental concerts were to be had last night from WNAC. During the first part of the evening we were given a band concert by the Salem Cadet Band, playing direct from the New Ocean House at Swampscott.

The second part of the program was by the Copley Plaza Orchestra, and this came through with all the clarity and beauty one could ask for. It was very interesting to observe the difference in tone quality which was obtainable from these two concerts, as compared with music which originates in a broadcasting studio. Both the Salem Cadet Band and the Copley Plaza Orchestra, played in open rooms, with bare undraped walls. The result naturally gave evidence of considerable echo. This echo is ordinarily an objection, especially when using certain types of loudspeakers with your receiving set.

Last night I was fortunately able to discover something which ought to be of interest to the fans. I brought home with me one of the cone type loud speakers and rigged it up on a switch so that I could switch suddenly from the corn to my horn type loud speaker. The results proved to me that the music coming from an open room or public hall sounded much more natural on the cone than it did on the horn.

While using the horn, I found the echo from this music to be bothersome. On the other hand, studio music, which I listentd to from from WEEI, came through better in many ways on the horn. In my tests I used one of the best horns and one of the best cones I could obtain.

The address by Dr. Cadman, coming from Swampscott through WNAC, was full of his usual spirit and convincing manner. The members of the Co-operative Bank League were indeed fortunate in being able to secure such an able speaker for their gathering this year. Dr. Cadman is as a solid rock in the high esteem of the radio audience.

The New York program from WEEI gave us a fine, very fine quality of music as well as [illegible] I observed that the usual Thursday night concert by [illegible] Orchestra came last night from Atlantic City where [illegible] were actually playing for [illegible] dance. During the course of the program I heard the orchestra leader make an announcement to the dancers that no encores would be given, owing to the fact that the music was being broadcast. The "Silver Masked" tenor was on the job as usual.

Last night was a dandy for the outside stations. Had a friend up at my house, and just for the fun of it asked him if he would like to hear Chicago. "Sure," he said. "Bet you can't get him!" But I fooled Mr. Friend. I set both dials for WGN, and "Zippo!" in he came full blast. This was so easy that I decided to go after WHT. To my further joy and agreeable surprise WHT came in fully as loud as WGN. It was a fine night for reaching out. There was some static, but hardly enough to bother you. In shifting around the dials, it seemed that the Chicago stations were about the loudest of any, outside of the New Yorkers.

The very fine organ music of WHT is to be commended. Not only have they one of the most beautifully sounding organs—but the man who plays it appears to be no amateur at the job. The faultless tone quality of WHT is not only confined to the organ, but is manifest in their orchestra music as well. It is one fine station.

TRIPLETS, ONE TOO MANY FOR "HAPPY FATHER"

New York, Oct. 9.—"Two is company; three is a crowd," said Leo Brodsky, a master electrician, when he slammed down the telephone receiver after being notified of the birth of a daughter, completing triplets.

Brodsky had borne up bravely under two previous announcements that he was the happy father of baby boys.

The History of Quinine

ONE of the most valuable remedies ever discovered is quinine. The drug has been known since 1655, when it was called "Jesuits' Powder." The bark has been used in England since 1660, Charles II. being relieved by it.

PIMPERNEL AND ROSEMARY

By BARONESS ORCZY

A Story of Love and Mystery That Bares the Heart of the Chief Plotter

the present situation by a direct question put to her by Jasper:

"Why didn't you tell me, dear that Peter Blakeney was in Transylvania?"

Jasper had put the question kindly.

"Peter Blakeney?" Rosemary asked slowly. "What in the world do you mean?"

"Don't look so scared, little one," Jasper rejoined, his stern face breaking into a smile. "As a matter of fact the whole thing has puzzled me.

"A moment ago, as I was crossing the hall General Naniescu came out of the smoking room into the outer vestibule. He did not see me, and I was just debating in my mind whether I would speak to him when he turned to a young officer who was evidently in attendance, and what he said to him was this: 'Ring up Mr. Blakeney at once and tell him I will see him about the business at five o'clock this afternoon; you may tell him that on the whole I think I have been successful.'"

"Impossible!" Rosemary exclaimed impulsively.

"I thought so at first, but I had confirmation of it later on.

"The officer called up the Hotel New York, at Cluj. I had the door open when I heard the officer say quite distinctly in French:

"'Is that you, Mr. Blakeney? Mr. Blakeney, his Excellency will see you——'"

"But this is all nonsense," Rosemary broke in warmly. "Peter is not in Transylvania. I am sure he is not. He would have told me. He would have let me know. It is some other Blakeney whom Naniescu was calling up."

Jasper shrugged. "Perhaps," he said quietly.

"I am sure," Rosemary insisted.

Jasper said nothing more after that, and Rosemary was conscious of a feeling of irritation against him, because he was so obviously convinced that Peter was in Transylvania and in secret communication with that odious Naniescu.

A Hard Situation

Fortunately after a little while the luncheon-bell sounded. Jasper jumped to his feet. He too seemed relieved that the subject of Peter could now be conveniently dropped.

"Will you see Elza?" he said abruptly.

"Elza?" Rosemary asked [illegible].

"Naniescu and his suite are in the house," Jasper replied dryly. "They will wait to lunch. I don't know how Elza will feel about it."

"She will feel as I do," Rosemary retorted hotly, "that the man's presence at her table is an outrage."

"But he told me that Philip and Anna will be allowed to come home."

"Yes. Provisionally. Until I ——"

"Elza need not know about that," Jasper broke in hurriedly. "That is why I thought you would see her. She need not know that Philip's release is only—conditional——"

"Poor darling!" Rosemary sighed; then she added more coldly: "But what about me?"

"What do you mean?"

"Am I expected to sit at table with that mealy-mouthed Roumanian?"

Jasper smiled. "How else would you explain the situation to Elza?" he asked.

"Will you keep Naniescu talking," Rosemary said finally, "while I see Elza?"

She looked quite cool and self-possessed now, beautifully dressed, one row of perfect pearls round her neck, circles of diamonds in her ears, a great lady conscious of her own beauty.

Obedient to her wish, he went downstairs to keep Naniescu talking, while she went to break the news to Elza.

The moment Rosemary came into the room she guessed that Elza somehow or other had heard the news. She had tears in her big, kind eyes, but they were tears of emotion, not of sorrow or anxiety.

"Philip is coming home with Anna!" she cried as soon as she caught sight of Rosemary.

"Who told you?" Rosemary asked.

"General Naniescu sent his captain to tell me. I only knew it five minutes ago. But oh, my dear, they have been such five minutes!"

Rosemary kissed her with tender affection. She did not feel somehow as if she could say much.

"When do you expect Philip and Anna?" Rosemary said.

"This afternoon," Elza exclaimed, and her words rang out like a cry of joy. "And you know Maurus is so happy that he has actually gone down in order to say something civil to Naniescu, who, of course, is staying for lunch.

"Oh, and I was almost forgetting," Elza resumed, while she tripped lightly along the gallery towards the stairs, "the smaller joy beside the greater—the greatest one! I heard from Peter Blakeney."

"From Peter?"

"Yes. He is at Cluj, at the New York. He is over here about some arrangement he wants to make for a cricket match or something of that sort. I had a letter from him this morning, but when it came I had no thought for anything except Philip. I must let you read it presently."

Peter Again

Rosemary, for the next three hours, was just an automaton, wound up to play a certain part.

After luncheon Jasper was quite charming. He had thought the whole matter over, he said, and decided that it was in his power to make a personal appeal to the King in favour of Philip and Anna. At any rate, there would be no harm in trying, and he would start for Bucharest.

"Bar accidents," he assured her "I shall be back in a fortnight. If I have definite good news to report I will wire. But even if you don't hear from me, I shall be back, as I say, in fifteen days."

"I shall count the hours until your return," she said.

"And in the meanwhile," he urged with deep earnestness, "you will do nothing without consulting me."

She smiled at this want of logic, so unlike her methodical husband.

"I could not consult you, dear," she said. "You won't be here."

"No, no I know," he insisted, "but I want you to promise that you will leave things as they are until my return. I don't want you to give anything away to Elza, or to Philip or Anna. Promise me."

"Of course I'll promise," she replied readily. "God knows I don't want to be the one to break the awful news to them."

"Or to Peter," he added gravely.

"Peter?"

"I want you to promise me—to promise, Rosemary, that you will not speak of this miserable affair to Peter Blakeney."

Then, as she seemed to hesitate, vaguely puzzled at his desperate earnestness, he again insisted:

"Promise me, Rosemary, whatever you may hear, whatever you may see, whatever may be planned by Elza or anybody else, promise me that you will not speak of it to Peter."

"But, Jasper," she exclaimed, "why? Of course I will promise, if you wish it, but frankly I don't understand why you insist, so solemnly too," she added.

"You can put it down to nerves," Jasper said, with the ghost of a smile, "to intuition or foreboding or merely to jealousy and my wretched character, to anything you please, my dear one. But promise me! Promise me that everything in connection with this miserable affair will remain just between you and me.

"Let the others talk, guess, plan. Promise me that you will never speak of it with Peter. Promise me, or I will throw up the sponge remain here to look after you, and let Naniescu do his worst with the lot of them."

The Promise

Thus, alternately demanding, entreating, threatening, he extracted the promise from her, even though her heart cried out against what she felt was treachery to Peter.

Jasper's insistence filled her with a vague sense of foreboding not unmixed with fear; and yet, the very next moment, as soon as he had her promise, he became tender, soft, loving, as if trying to make her forget his solemn earnestness of a while ago. He took her in his arms and gazed into her eyes with an intensity of longing which made her own heart ache with self-reproach.

"If God there be," he whispered softly, as if to himself, "it was cruel of Him to make you so beautiful—and so desirable."

There was something about Jasper at this moment that she could not entirely fathom. Twice before she had seen him in these moods of violent passion akin almost to savagery, when she felt utterly helpless and absolutely in his power. She had the feeling that when he was in one of these moods he was capable of any violence against her if she dared to disobey or resist.

"You—you will care for me some day, Rosemary?" he asked with passionate earnestness. "Say that you will some day, when all this—all this is forgotten, and we are back in England, free to live our own lives, free to love. You will care for me then, Rosemary, will you not? For I could not live beside you for long, feeling all the time that you did not belong to me with your whole soul. You have such haunting eyes—eyes such as pixies and fairies have—maddening eyes. I should go crazy presently if I failed to kindle the love-light in those eyes."

He kissed her eyes, her mouth, her throat. Rosemary would have struggled, would have screamed if she dared.

Fortunately a knock at the door and the entrance of one of the menservants, who came to fetch milord's luggage, put an end to a situation which Rosemary found very difficult to endure.

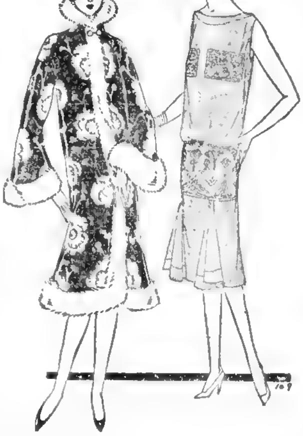
Latest From Paris



Paris, France.

HERE is one of the season's new coat models from Philippe et Gaston. It is in black satin and the pattern is appliqued and embroidered in beige. The material of the applique is the finest suede. The fur border is of exactly matching beige fox, running right round the coat and lining the Medici collar fastened over in front with linked beige buttons. This Medici collar has been revived in contrast with the band shape which was so much worn last year. The other new fur collar shape is the shawl. These two are much newer than the band collar and give a last year's coat a new look. The lining is beige satin exactly matching the fur.

The Callot frock at the right is for formal afternoon or informal evening or theatre wear. It is in bois de rose crepe satin, the crepe side being used mainly with the satin side as trimming. This idea persists in all the new collections. The embroidery which exactly matches the crepe is very delicate and fine. There are godets in the front of the skirt, which are edged with the satin side in order to accentuate them. The bodice is very slightly bloused, and held in place by a motif of enamel and gold.

LISTEN, WORLD!

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

By Elsie Robinson

GERTIE is excited over the treatment she gets from a Cruel, Hard World. Can you tell Gertie that everyone appreciates a sweet, friendly [illegible]! You CAN NOT. [illegible] different. She's 1,000,000 [illegible]power sweet herself and what does it get her? It gets her a pain in the neck. That's what it gets her.

Gertie was the original Little Sunbeam. She started her stuff when she was about six days old and she's still going strong at thirty-eight. Loving is her specialty. [illegible] to be a Little Sister to All the World.

You've heard of people "gushing." Gush is too mild a word to apply to Gertie. [illegible] lively fire hose to meet this lady. Her heart actually bursts loose all over the premises. Five seconds after [illegible] she has discovered fifty-seven varieties of mystic bonds between your twin souls. In ten minutes she's informing you that she feels as if she's known you all her life. Before you part you're installed as her Most Intimate Friend, and if you thereafter don't live up to the part, may the saints [illegible] you!

Yet She's Unpopular.

Does she really mean it? Yes, she really does. She's made that way. Her quivering heart just naturally glows on to any human that happens her way. And she's perfectly sincere in her protestations of admiration and affection. You may be as full of faults as a pup is of fleas, but to Gertie you're the human miracle.

Now you'd think that a lady like this would be simply besieged with devotion by a grateful following, wouldn't you? Then you think wrong. She isn't. She's the most unpopular person I know. She's avoided—even detested. Strong men crawl under the davenport when [illegible] women get out the [illegible]

Take me, for instance. Gertie acted like two fire hoses when she met me. She'd read everything I'd written for years and years! Why it was almost as if she'd written it herself. She just KNEW that there was SOMETHIN[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] a great impression on me. She had [illegible] a porous plaster.

Now why should I have taken such a dislike to this lady? Am I adverse to hearing glad greetings about myself? I am NOT. I am extremely partial to compliments, conversation [illegible] I can usually endure any amount of praise. I'm not even above egging them on when they get started that way.

BUT GERTIE GOT MY GOAT.

She Got Results.

She made me feel just as if I'd stepped on a wad of gum or sat on a chocolate cream. Judging by results, that's the way Gertie makes most people feel.

Does this seem cruel to the Gertrudes of the world? Gertie says it's cruel. [illegible] the normal, healthy reaction to an abnormal approach.

Gertie is sincere, but she's fooling herself. She thinks she loves every one, but she doesn't. [illegible] It isn't even possible [illegible] long time. It is [illegible]

It IS possible for a weak [illegible] nature to want to attach itself to every support that comes along, which is Gertie's desire. MAKING OF A HUSBAND

By Anne Lisle

"YOU mean the trend of Big Business?" I asked with an attempt at raillery.

"I mean the affairs of the people who interest me," Rockhill corrected gravely, nodding to the waiter to serve the salad course.

"Haines, [illegible]worth and me," I said with a little choke in my voice. "Funny how the little firms get swept into the maelstrom big ones make when they go down."

"You needn't," Mr. Rockhill said curtly.

"I'm sure I can make the grade if even one of my big clients stands by. That is what I wanted to discuss with you, Mr. Rockhill."

"I'm that one—if you want me to be. I'll stand by."

"Will you really? Then all my worries are over. If I hold your firm's business—and get a bit more perhaps—I can tide over—use you for reference—discount my bills with a free mind," I cried exultantly.

"I'll stand by if you want me enough."

"I'm grateful," I cried.

"How grateful?" he asked. "If you like me as much as I like you I'll see you through. I'm the one man you can absolutely count on if you want me to be the one man."

I wanted to leap to my feet and run. But I was dining in public. I couldn't make a scene. How could I escape further insult?

Mr. Rockhill leaned forward and asked suavely and pleasantly:

"Shall I be— your friend—or your enemy?"

"I wouldn't be a good enemy." [illegible] Rockhill.

I sat rooted to the spot, realizing that I was a woman alone, and that I could not afford a scene even to escape the insult I was being forced to endure.

IT is not necessary for you to take a gift to the party. But if you wish, take a carton of cigarettes or a box of sweets for the party, or a book or phonograph [illegible]

DAILY SHORT STORY

RICH MAN—POOR MAN

By Eudora Ramsay Richardson

MYRTLE ANN had been poor all her life. Consequently she thought that being poor was the cruelest fate of all. Her father was exceedingly brilliant, and perfect[illegible] adorable, but he didn't make en[illegible] money.

Instead of turning his [illegible] to some such lucrative profession as defending wealthy criminals, or separating millionaires from bits of their anatomy, or taking up p[illegible] and oil leases, he entertained [illegible] nuring constituency [illegible] columns for The Leader. [illegible] while placing him [illegible] newspaper aristocracy, did not provide five children with all they might desire in the way of fur coats and limousines.

By the most unk[illegible] ity, Myrtle Ann at twenty five [illegible] herself editing the woman's page of the very paper that had been the cause of her half-soled shoes and made-over dresses. The worst of it was that she loved her work with a passion that would feed upon nothing else.

Made Position Clear

"But I'll marry a very rich man and then free lance," she often told a doubting family.

One afternoon as she walked through the wintry streets with David B[illegible], a br[illegible] young reporter on The Leader, she made her position quite clear. While the gaiety of her [illegible] and the sparkle [illegible] her eyes [illegible] every word she [illegible] said, she [illegible] quite [illegible] [illegible] for [illegible]

"So I'm [illegible] a wea[illegible] his [illegible] she [illegible]

Then she [illegible] meet David's [illegible] seemed [illegible] Myrtle Ann [illegible] coat of a boy who had just heard that there was [illegible] swimming hole.

"Of course I [illegible] Myrtle [illegible] you," said David B[illegible] successful [illegible]

Indeed it was no coincidence at all that a few days later Myrtle Ann discovered the eligible millionaire. Nothing so persistently sought after can be the least miraculous. Ever since she had been promoted to the writing of special articles, Myrtle Ann had been searching for stories that involved the trailing of the wicked rich to their lairs. Most of her victims, however, while appearing totally unable to withhold facts from their past from the pretty reporter, did not offer themseves. In the case of Luther Morse, however, the only wife who had ever been his had for two years belonged to a French count, while for a greater period of time, Mr. Morse had been as free as the wiles of scheming mothers permitted.

Got Her Chance

Gunmen's looting of some of the jewels the count had required his wife to return to him, gave Myrtle Ann a chance for an interview. She must have seemed to the butler harmless enough, for she was ushered right into the drawing room where Luther Morse smoked in solitary luxury. At first the reporter, who thought herself very sophisticated, stood gaping at the handsomeness of the room and incidentally of the owner whose interest in her was immediately apparent.

"I'm Myrtle Ann Turner of The Leader," she said at last, "here to write a feature story about the stolen jewels."

Luther Morse seemed surprised but not displeased. He answered all Myrtle's questions and ended by asking her to have dinner and go to the theatre with him that evening. Being quite modern and very sure of herself, Myrtle Ann accepted.

So was begun such a whirlwind courtship as one reads about but seldom witnesses. Little time was left for the late afternoon walks with David Baylor. Each day Luther Morse accompanied Myrtle Ann gorgeously to luncheon, and in the evening his car took her home where all the Turners watched in wonder while Myrtle Ann donned evening gowns she could scarcely afford. Later she was whirled away for the gay evenings she had always thought she craved.

Mornings, however, found Myrtle Ann heavy-eyed and dull, and she knew full well that the copy she turned out reflected her mood. It was an additional annoyance, moreover, to see David Baylor's wistful eyes upon her whenever she looked up from her typewriter. His work was suffering, too, and that was distressing to Myrtle Ann, for David possessed an undeniable flare of genius that prophesied a career interesting to follow.

Becomes Unhappy

As Myrtle Ann came nearer the affluence she had dreamed of, she was for the first time in her life actually, instead of theoretically, unhappy.

There came an afternoon when the little reporter was too tired to dine and dance. So she made her excuses to Luther Morse and started to walk home alone through the bracing air. So it was that David Baylor joined her. He just fell in step and for a block was quite silent. When he spoke, there was a stilted restraint in his voice.

"Why don't you tell an old friend about the progress of your love affair?" he asked.

Myrtle Ann smiled joylessly as she replied: "I guess I'm going to ride on the velvet," she said.

"Then you'll have time, I suppose, to write magazine articles and short stories and books."

"I thought so, but now I'm not sure. There are a town house and a country house and a man who never tires of frivolity at night and more social engagements than I thought could be in all the world."

"Perhaps Mr. Morse will take an interest in your work and clear the path," David consoled.

Whereupon Myrtle Ann shook her head gloomily. "He understands your ambitions and mine about as clearly as a cat comprehends the solar system."

Myrtle Ann and David Baylor had turned into a quiet street that had long constituted their beaten path homeward. The girl was glad that it was almost dark, for her lips quivered, and her eyes were distressingly full.

"I hope you'll be happy," David Baylor said, and then and there Myrtle Ann actually wept and no longer seemed to mind David's seeing her.

Understood Her

"That's it, David," she sobbed. "I'm afraid I won't be. I'll not be living a life of my own—just part of the menage—his house—with sumptuous furniture I should never have chosen—his—his—Oh, David!"

As David put his hand on her arm, Myrtle Ann knew that he was trying to comfort her and that he understood.

"Poor Myrtle Ann!" He said. "You are clever and certainly intended to make a name for yourself. It is interesting to achieve—and then to talk things over with someone who thinks as you do."

"Yes, yes!" Myrtle Ann blurted out. "I guess I can't marry him, David. After all, I think I like being poor and working for what I get."

David Baylor's voice was all choky when he replied. "I didn't believe you could, Myrtle Ann," he said. "I love you. Don't you think that you and I might work out a life that would be interesting to live?"

"I know it!" said Myrtle Ann confidently.

MOSQUITO NETTING SAVES HIS LIFE

By Foxy Grandpa

"THIS mosquito netting certainly saved my life," muttered Bobby as he tucked it in under and around the cot on which he was sleeping.

"I should say so," I agreed, giving it an extra tuck before going into my own room in the shack, in which we were living in a jungle in India.

"If you had on a fur coat like mine, bugs wouldn't bother you so much," said Bunny, curling up on the corner of Bobby's bed. "But it certainly gets hot in these warm climates."

I turned in under my mosquito net and tried to sleep. But it was too hot.

Suddenly I had what I considered a brilliant idea, but as it turned out it wasn't so very brilliant after all.

My idea was to take my cot out under the tree and hang my mosquito netting to the limb of the tree and sleep there, where it was a few degrees cooler.

I followed out this foxy scheme and I'm here to say that this time I didn't live up to my name. For I was anything but a Foxy Grandpa.

Before I know it I was asleep, dreaming that I had to dance and was dancing in a contest with elephants and lions.

But my dream faded into nothingness at this point. I was just dreaming that there were tigers in the contest, too, when I felt something hot on my face.

I sat up in bed, rubbed my eyes and my heart stood still. My blood froze in my veins. Was I dreaming or wasn't I?

I wasn't. I was wide awake—wider awake than at any time in my life, and there shining right in my face were the two bright, glaring eyes of a tiger!

I shivered with fear and then I slunk back in my cot as far from the beast as I could possibly get. As I drew away from him I let out the most horrible shriek you could imagine, for there on the other side of my bed was the tiger's mate.

Badly scared, I fell back on my cot, as the two great tigers gave a leap and a bound and disappeared into the darkness. I had frightened them away by my sudden cry and didn't know it.

In a moment out came Bunny.

"Oh, Foxy Grandpa, I saw what was going on and there wasn't a thing to do. I was helpless."

"But why didn't they eat me, Bunny?" I gasped.

"The mosquito-netting, Foxy Grandpa. They sniffed around at you and when their noses touched the netting they pulled away as if they weren't quite sure what it was."

DR. REED'S SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. Reed, M. D.

YOU are necessarily interested in the fact that you live in the midst of those small, microscopic forms of life that are called bacteria.

All of them are really germs in the sense that they constitute a germ of life for the propagation and perpetuation of their own species. We, however, are in the habit of speaking of them as germs only when they constitute the seed or germs of disease.

When I tell you that germs are in the air and in water and in food and on the surfaces of all things with which you come in contact, you can readily understand how impossible, or at least difficult, it is to keep the surface of your body free from germs under ordinary conditions of exposure.

This set of facts would be almost tragic in its significance if all germs were disease-producing germs.

As a matter of fact the majority of all germs are inocuous, so far as their effect upon the human system is concerned, and some of them are really necessary to sustain human life.

It is not to be forgotten, however, that wherever inocuous germs exist, dangerous germs may likewise exist.

It is, therefore, of the highest importance that you should exercise habits of cleanliness, with the distinct understanding that you are doing so for the purpose of keeping the exposed surfaces of your body as nearly as possible free from germ contamination.

That this perfection of cleanliness, a condition that is spoken of as "surgical cleanliness," is not practicable as a regular habit, is easily proven if you will just take a squint at some of the germs that are on the surface of your own body. You, of course, cannot see those that rest upon your fingernails, or your skin, but you can see those that happen to lie upon the surface of your eye. They reach the eye from the air and there float in the minute quantity of tear-water that constantly bathes the front of the eyeball.

If now you will turn your face to a bright light, either a window or an electric light, and bring your eyelids so closely together that you can just peep between them, you will convert your eyeballs into two very effective microscopes. The narrower the aperture between the lids, the greater will be the magnifying power. You will now see a number of objects floating in the field of vision.

Some will consist of little, round bodies, either single or in chains of from three to six or seven. These are that form of germs that are called cocci. Others will be rod-like, still others spiral, both of which are types of that form of germs called bacilli. There may be other objects, generally irregular in form, which are only inanimate particles of dust.

This is a really very important observation.

One that you can make yourself and upon yourself, and one which will convince you not only as to the form and existence of germs, but of their presence in the air about you.

Mother, said a little boy neighbor, coming from a walk, I've seen a man who makes horses.

Are you sure? asked his mother.

Yes, he replied. He had a horse nearly finished when I saw him; he was just nailing on its back feet.

FINANCE

By B. C. FORBES

Six men were at the dinner table. Five of them filled responsible positions. The sixth introduced the subject of the world's baseball series. Not one of the five knew anything about the contest. Several couldn't tell when the matches would be played. The sixth man apparently had complete baseball data at his finger tips.

I once asked James A. Farrell, president of the U. S. Steel Corporation and walking encyclopedia on shipping, how he had cultivated what is perhaps the most amazing memory of any business leader in America. He replied: "I don't ask my mind to absorb all kinds of useless information. For example, I don't clutter it up with the batting averages of baseball players, or other things of no earthly service to me in my work."

James J. Hill in his day had admittedly the greatest memory of any man of large affairs. When I quizzed him, Mr. Hill explained: "It is easy to remember things you are interested in. I don't try to remember things I am not interested in."

The head of a department pointed to a young woman the other day and remarked, "I have just had to give her notice. She is one of the brightest girls in the place and gets more pay than most of them, but she has nothing in her head but frivolity. When I ask her a question which she should be able to answer, she rarely could remember a thing about the subject. The final straw was when I asked her the other day to work overtime, and she refused because she was going out dancing—as usual.

"Look at that other one. She has had less experience and I know she didn't have as much education. But she's a dandy. Her mind is on her work. She does not have to be told twice to do a thing. She can answer questions right off the bat. She is already paying an income tax, and there is no telling how far she will go."

TAKES FIRST VACATION IN 14 YEARS

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor.

Vice-President Howard M. Biscoe of the New York Central Railroad, in charge of the leased Boston & Albany Railroad, is missed by his associates at the South Station. Mr. Biscoe is having his first vacation in 14 years, I am told. It is extremely doubtful if many railroad heads can show as long a record of sticking close to their post of duty.

This mention of Mr. Biscoe is likely to revive the discussion instituted by our Mr. B. C. Forbes who contends that too few business men take the vacations that they ought to enjoy and which are conducive to general efficiency and longevity. It must be admitted right here that Mr. Biscoe has shown no lack of efficiency.

In "The Formative Period of the Federal Reserve System," published by Houghton-Mifflin Co., W. P. G. Harding, now governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, reviews the first eight years of the Federal Reserve System, during which he served on the Federal Reserve Board, for the last six years as governor.

In view of all that happened in war and peace during those eight stirring years, Governor Harding's narrative, written primarily from a personal and institutional viewpoint, pictures a sequence of historically significant conditions and episodes, some of them newly analyzed or revealed. Particularly the book sets forth certain phases of our wartime financing and of the "inflation" and "deflation" after-war periods.

Program for the annual meeting of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, to be held at the Copley Plaza, October 14 and 15, has been completed. Speakers for the Wednesday afternoon session will be John S. Lawrence, Louis E. Kirstein, John E. Rousmaniere and Frederic H. Curtis. At the banquet Thursday evening President Morgan Butler of the association will be toastmaster and Francis Vernon Willey, president of the British Federation of Industries, will be the speaker.

Resignation of Mortimer Silverman, fuel engineer for the State Commissioner on Administration and Finance, to become assistant to Homer Loring, chairman of the executive committee of the Boston & Maine Railroad, has been announced. He assumes his new duties Nov. 1.

President Percy R. Todd of the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad denies control of the line has passed into new hands. The report, perhaps, grew out of the fact that President Todd started out from Bangor a couple of days ago with directors to inspect the line, accompanied by the usual number of financiers who make it a point to take the annual trip over one of New England's most picturesque sections. Aroostook stock is owned in twenty-eight States.

Following former directors of the National Union Bank have been added to the board of the State Street Trust Co. Henry S. Grew, president of the National Union Bank until the time of the merger with the State Street Trust and a director in several important corporations; Morton C. Tuttle, president, treasurer and director of the Morton C. Tuttle Co., engineers, and one of the trustees of Dartmouth College; E. Sohier Welch, attorney and trustee and a director in many large organizations.

No "Yes Man" Founded Providence

If Roger Williams Had Been Willing to "Go Easy" Life Would Have Been Much Softer for Him

How firm is your faith in anything?

Are you a "yes" man, or would you stand up, suffer, die if necessary, for a principle?

Two hundred and ninety years ago today a young preacher was sentenced to banishment from this town of Boston, from the Bay Colony, in fact, because he had "broached and divulged divers new and dangerous opinions."

He had declared that the King of England had no right to give away land in America, because it belonged to the Indians. For saying this he was called a traitor.

He declared in America, as he had declared in England, that no government should force any form of worship on anyone; that Church and State should be separate. Though this was the very freedom the men of Massachusetts had left England to find, they now refused it to those who did not agree with THEM.

No one appears to be absolutely certain of the place of his birth, his exact age is a matter of doubt, we do not know whether he was tall or short, dark or light, blue-eyed or brown, but Roger Williams, who plunged through the woods in Winter, headed for Narragansett Bay, will be remembered forever as one of our great champions of religious freedom—the "Apostle of Soul Liberty"—and one of the mightiest figures of colonial days.

Much like what our President said a day or two ago, to the Legionnaires at Omaha, were some observations made by the Founder of Providence, nearly three hundred years ago.

> The State, Roger Williams said, was like an immense ship carrying all kinds of passengers. Among them are Catholics, Protestants, Jews and Turks. Their different religions are, of course, very unlike and the captain should be sensible enough to understand this and let each one worship as he pleases, according to his peculiar custom. This is only fair, as long as the passengers remain peaceful and orderly. If, however, any of them refuses to pay his fare, or disturbs the peace, then only has the captain a right to step in and punish the offender. He does not interfere because the culprit is a Jew or a Catholic or a Protestant, but because he has not respected the rights of others. In the same way, the State has a right to see that its citizens are well behaved, but should leave their religion alone.

An hour or more may be spent with profit, on this anniversary of his sentence of banishment, reading what Roger Williams wrote and what other men have written about him.

You may read how, in his first chaplaincy in England, he fell in love with the young cousin of his "patron's" wife.

Whether Williams ever told Jane Whalley of his love does not appear. First, as was the custom of the times, he approached her elders. The result was that Sir William Masham soon had a new chaplain. Less than two years later, the struggling minister transferred his affections to Mary Barnard, with whom he lived happy ever after. He picked posies for her in Winter.

What if it had been today!

Today, the eloquent young cleric would go straight to his Jane, who, like as not, would snap her fingers at Lady Barrington, her aunt and guardian, and send her a telegram from their first stopping place: "Roger and I married. Love. (Signed) Jane."

Our young women certainly marry more precipitately than was the custom when Jane and Roger and Mary were young, but we doubt very much if many of our young men would set out from Boston for Seekonk, in the snow, rather than stand up before the meeting and say: "Gentlemen, I am sorry; I retract every word of it; I shall not offend again."

But there was only ONE Roger Williams in Roger Williams' day.

A tremendously interesting and important life. Read about it.

$400,000,000 Bakery?

Why Not? The Bigger the Better

Various concerns engaged in making excellent bread—bread-making is now an exact science—plan a $400,000,000 merger. This will be greeted with the usual shrieks, but why?

If one baker's wagon can do the work of three, through consolidation, if three presidents with big salaries can be reduced to one, and, if part of the saving through consolidation can be handed on to the public, why object?

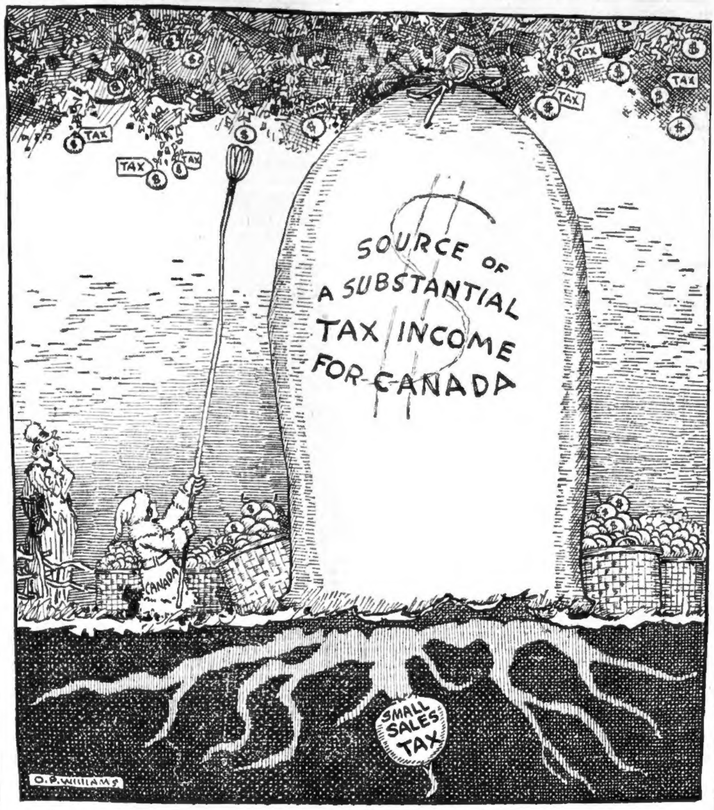
The bigger the business the better, if the people get part of the benefit, and if the people haven't brains enough to watch and control one four-hundred-million-dollar bread concern, they won't have brains enough to protect themselves against combinations among smaller concerns.

The bread-making giant might even do something for farmers, by organizing direct dealing between men that grow wheat and the corporation. That it can do great good, and at the same time look after its own interests is proved by life insurance companies, notably by Mr. Aisme, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. The company spends millions in giving the public sound advice on health that incidentally prolongs the lives of policyholders, postponing payments.

From Mr. Stabler of that same organization you learn of the company's housing experiment, supplying on a sound business basis moderately priced living apartments. Thousands are on the waiting list for apartments that rent for half the usual charge and pay the Metropolitan Company a profit of seven per cent. on the investment.

Men that manage big corporations and complain of public prejudice might learn to make themselves popular, by being useful.

Big Harvest From Little Seed



TAX
CANADA
SMALL SALES TAX
O.P. WILLIAMS

AMERICAN business men, above all others, should appreciate the virtues of the sales tax.

They know what a small profit amounts to when multiplied a limitless number of times. Huge businesses have been built out of that knowledge.

So huge tax receipts can be built out of the tiny sales tax. It is multiplied a limitless number of times. There is the parable of the mustard seed. There is the growth of great oaks from little acorns.

But the sales tax, as Canada has proved, is even more impressive. It produces fruit in money. Only those pay the money who eat the fruit. And they hardly know they are paying it. And it is as easy to collect as to pluck ripe fruit.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

SEVERAL large cities have installed these new automatic telephones and subscribers can now get a wrong number without the aid of central.

YOU not only get them quicker, but you get more of them.

ONE woman went out in the hall the other morning and found her little boy playing with the dial on the telephone. He said he was learning his arithmetic lesson.

THAT afternoon when she went down town she caught her husband trying to get long distance on the adding machine.

HE said he'd been punching it for an hour and got nothing but busy signals.

WOMEN hate these automatic dials because they break their finger nails in them. But the men use them for cigar cutters.

THESE new 'phones are great for afternoon card parties. You can add up your bridge score on them.

BUT no matter how many hands you play the telephone company usually wins the rubber.

THE person at this end of the line is always the dummy.

THIS automatic instrument was a shrewd move on the part of the telephone officials. They can now get their operators out of the deaf and dumb asylums.

PEOPLE have been going to gymnasiums for years, but never before have we been able to take knuckle exercises.

ALL you have to do when you get up in the morning is 'phone a couple of times and your hands are wide awake.

YOU can break all your fingers and still be able to telephone with your thumbs.

THESE new automatic instruments are just like a radio. When you turn the dials you never know what you're going to get.

THIS new instrument is a wonderful invention and all we need now is some sort of a devise that will automatically pay your 'phone bill for you on the first of the month.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

—By MARCELINE D'ALROY—

ON "NATURE'S GIFT"

ALL WOMEN LOVE GIFTS
And are on the LOOK OUT
For them ALWAYS.
SOME women think MAN
Is NATURE'S GIFT
TO WOMEN.
But then, there ARE women
Who NEVER grow up, or
They would see through
THAT trick;
For with EVERY gift
Inevitably there is
A TAG of some kind
Somewhere. NATURE
Has many of us
BLUFFED. She appears
PRODIGAL, but actually
She is a THRIFTY SOUL.
When she BESTOWS HER
GIFTS, it is just to LEAD men and women into MATRIMONY; and THEN,
She always expects
SOMETHING in RETURN.
She is the greatest feminine
GRAFTER of the AGES,
And so ADROIT that Women NEVER see THROUGH
HER till they pay
Or RE-PAY her.

THE FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

Letters Must Not Contain More Than Two Hundred Words.
No Anonymous Communications Will Be Considered

The National Bird

To the Friend of the People:

Could you inform me through your column how long an eagle has been used on American money? Why was it taken off the cent of thirty or more years ago?

CHARLES BASCOM.

Mt. Vernon street.

The eagle was first used on American money in 1795, when Congress authorized its issuance on a gold coin, valued at ten dollars. It was taken off the cent to prevent confusion with other coins.

Street Signs Again

To the Friend of the People:

I was glad to read in your paper that action would soon be taken to mark the different streets of Boston, especially at the junction of streets.

Being a stranger here, where I have spent nearly all the Summer, I have often been bewildered in finding the street I was searching for.

Even the native Bostonians one approaches on the street are unable to guide a stranger because of the lack of signs. HENRY C. FOLSOM.

Toledo, O.

Aqua Pura in Water

To the Friend of the People:

Why cannot physicians modernize their prescriptions by putting them in English, instead of Latin? I have often thought of this because we who get them made up at the drug store would like to know some of the ingredients that we are taking.

I do not see the use of this unless it is intended to give a learned air to the profession.

MELVIN H. WATSON.

Lawrence.

College Educated Wives

To the Friend of the People:

Does the college bred woman make the best wife? Mrs. Arthur L. Livermore of the Women Republican Club claims that she does.

College training often gives a woman ideas far beyond her attainment. Most of the education is not practical. If women could be trained to be better housekeepers, instead of delving in a smattering of French, German, and other avenues of theoretical knowledge, something that is called efficiency would result.

College education must be changed if women are to make the best wives. We do not despair of this, but the present training of women in college is not conducive towards this end.

MARY E. FLEMING.

Framingham.

Hired Pallbearers

To the Friend of the People:

What is this world coming to? Now they are agitating, as I found in your paper, hired carriers of the caskets for funerals. This is advocated by President F. W. Patterson of the National Selected Morticians. Everyone is trying these days to take the sentiment out of life. In olden times, they used to hire persons to do the weeping at funerals, as the Bible tells us.

We are commercializing everything. Spare the funerals. For goodness' sake, keep some events sacred in our memories.

ALVIN B. NELSON.

Allston.

For Married Teachers

To the Friend of the People:

I do not agree with the school committee's ban on teachers in the schools. My experience is that married teachers are more efficient. Let us congratulate the committee now that they have seen the light and withdrawn their suit against Mrs. Quinn. MRS. ALICE H. COOK.

Wellington street, Boston.

Faithfulness in Dogs

To the Friend of the People:

I have just read in your paper of a man who has a grudge against dogs. He wants the tax upon them increased.

Of course, this is in line with everything else.

I would not live without dogs in my home and I have had them for years. Increase the tax if you will, but let me say right here, since knowing human beings for years, I love dogs better than ever.

I never knew what faithfulness meant in others until my dogs showed me. JOHN N. NELSON.

GET INTO RUT OF SPECIALIZATION

By DR. FRANK CRANE

AT first sight there is not so much difference between specialization and a rut.

Both are a narrowing down of activity to a small phase of the whole.

Both mean a missing of many of the other sides of life.

Both mean a confining of interests and a sense of giving up.

The outstanding difference between the two is that specialization is a road with a third rail.

The rut is not.

The third rail is ambition.

A man voluntarily enters the confining path of specialization. He has a big end in view. He has the power of ambition to drive him on.

The other is involuntary. The man just slides into the rut. It is the line of least resistance.

The former course is dictated from within the man himself. He is master of his choice.

In the latter the impetus comes from without. The man succumbs to the pressure of material things outside of himself.

In one he sacrifices; in the other he submits.

Specialization is a road lined with gates which can be opened from within. A rut is a road in which the gates are locked from without.

One shows self-control and strength of purpose; the other weakness and lack of spirit.

One is prepared for; the other is slipped into.

In one case the man likes and chooses the work. In the other he hates or is indifferent to it.

In the rut progress stops. Specialization leads somewhere.

A rut is a road that runs around and around a mountain at the same altitude. It never gets any higher. It does not lead up.

Specialization is a rut that leads to the mountain top.

Both a rut and specialization keep getting deeper and deeper as you go on. Gradually the desire or ability to get out becomes greater.

But in specialization as you wear deeper you are nearing the top. In the rut you are just sinking more out of sight while remaining at the same level.

Neither the typical specialist nor the man in the rut is an all-around man.

The difference is that one has voluntarily dropped out of much of life for some big end, while the other was unable to avoid it.

THE SPECTACLES OF ST. PAUL

By Garrett P. Serviss,

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

A FRENCH doctor, A. Bourgeois, calls attention to the fact that in the great Bibliotheque Nationale there exists an illuminated manuscript Bible dated 1330, in which St. Paul is pictured wearing a pair of spectacles.

While this picture appears to be only a play of the illuminator's fancy, yet it certainly seems well based on probability.

The "Apostle of the Gentiles" possessed all the learning of his time (such as it was), and could not have acquired it without strenuous use of his eyes, since it demanded a vast amount of close reading, and if anything resembling spectacles was to be had in his day, he would surely have been one of the first to employ such an aid to eyesight.

In any event, the picture shows that 600 years ago—when the Bible manuscript in question was written and illuminated—the use of spectacles must have been known and generally recognized as a hall-mark of the scholar.

But this picture of St. Paul wearing spectacles is not by any means singular in the age to which it belongs. A writer in the Journal des Debats cites a description from a little work written at Florence in 1299, by a superannuated private teacher, who says:

Burdened With Years

"I find myself now so burdened with years that I should no longer be able to read or to write but for the glasses called 'occhiali,' recently invented for the comfort of poor people whose eyesight has failed."

In 1352 a painter, Thomas of Modena, adorning a hall contiguous to the sacristy of the Church of Saint Nicholas at Treviso, included in his fresco portraits of the whole chapter of the order of the Dominicans, showing forty monks engaged in study.

They are furnished, says Father A. J. Berthier, "with everything necessary for reading and writing, only that there are no magnifying glasses or spectacles, except on the nose of one personage, who is the Cardinal Hugues de Provence. He wears a binocle with two round glasses, which turn upon a single screw. It is what the Spaniards still night: call the 'gafa.'"

This is the same device described by Dr. Bourgeois as worn by St. Paul in the picture in the illuminated Bible at the Bibilitheque Nationale. The binocle of the Cardinal Hugues is the oldest known representation of spectacles on the nose of an identifiable historic personage.

Since the illuminator who made the picture of St. Paul did his work nearly thirty years later than the painting of the fresco at Treviso, it is not improbable that he caught the idea of decorating the apostle with so striking a symbol of literary labor, by studying the portrait of the spectacled cardinal that Thomas of Modena had placed amidst his forty unspectacled brethren in the Church of St. Nicholas.

Date Far Back

Considering the fact that spectacles date back at least to the 13th century, and that they had become very common in the time of Galileo and of Hans Lippershey (himself a spectacle maker by trade), it is altogether probable that they were formerly used by many monks, clerks and other men of literary attainments, and search may reveal portraits of an earlier date than that of the Cardinal of Provence, showing these invaluable aids to human vision seated triumphant upon the throne of the nose before the double window of the soul through which most of our knowledge of the external world and of the doings of our fellow mortals is derived.

The invention of spectacles has been ascribed to the famous Roger Bacon, monk and natural philosopher, but apparently they were known before him. There is a legend that Nero, the fiddling Emperor, who at any rate watched Rome burning if he did not have it set on fire, possessed a kind of opera glass set in a ring, through which he gloatingly studied the struggles and agonies of the gladiators on the bloody sands of the Coliseum.

BE CAUTIONS IN SPECULATING IN NEW DEVELOPMENTS

You have heard of the fortunes made in some other locality.

You strongly contemplate selling your present holdings so that you can migrate to that place which sends back such golden reports.

You would break away from solid and substantial moorings and go chasing a rainbow.

Before you do anything rash, take a trip to the proposed new home of your dreams and remain there a while.

That may be all that is necessary to convince you that reports are greatly exaggerated and prices inflated.

You may also learn that the route to quick returns on such real estate is an unfamiliar [illegible] to you. You would be a lamb to be shorn by the sharks, who are well versed in getting the other fellow's money.

It took you a long time to get the present nest-egg.

Can you afford to gamble what has taken years to lay away?

If you have some extra money, a small amount on which you can afford to take a chance, go to the new section and invest it, after sufficient investigation.
